THE CHINESE BILL.

Report of the Debate in the House on Saturday.

WHAT THE PACIFIC COAST MEMBERS SAID

[illegible] Votes Against the Bill [illegible] Up Brewer

[illegible]—The Pacific coast [illegible] introduced by Henley on [illegible] the house shortly after [illegible] afternoon. The entire [illegible] the measure and at [illegible] attendance he [illegible] every member who was [illegible] appearance. The vote [illegible] [illegible] which [illegible] for debating the [illegible] perfect the present [illegible] is defective was so [illegible] supplemental bill was [illegible] original legislation [illegible] the only member who [illegible] as to the policy [illegible] among whom there [illegible] members merely ranted [illegible] and displayed their [illegible] the Pacific coast were elected on a nonpartisan ticket and only one man of the [illegible] who opposed the [illegible] against [illegible] in the subject. Chinamen contribute nothing for the support of the government either state or national. They do not assimilate with the people of this country. They bring their own customs with them and carry them out even to the extent of [illegible] to [illegible] for violating their social customs.

Dillon of Massachusetts in opposition referred to the "know nothing" movement of [illegible] throughout Massachusetts some years ago directed against the Irish. He had cast his first vote at that election against the movement. It was so [illegible] then that a governor was elected by that party in [illegible]. Now the Irish [illegible] and the people are [illegible] the [illegible] off for it. The Chinese were described as thieves and yet they were employed in families in California as waiters and chambermaids and the silver and valuables in the house were under their hands. If the people thought them so bad why did they employ them.

Poland of Vermont referred to the fact that objection was raised against the Chinese because they did not become naturalized and yet when the naturalization laws were revised such a cry was made against them that the committee [illegible] so they could not be naturalized.

[illegible]

Browne of Indiana opposed the bill because it violated his idea of human rights. He charged California with [illegible] the Chinese because they are [illegible] [illegible] people of California [illegible] If California had been [illegible] by Chinese [illegible] labor is higher in California than in any other state.

Budd—In every occupation in which Chinese engage wages are [illegible] than in other states at [illegible] occupations in which they are excluded wages are higher.

Henley referred to recent measures enacted in British Columbia and Australia against the further coming of the Chinese as the best evidence that England would not interfere. It [illegible] that England is going to quarrel with the United States for [illegible] these people what she had done herself but even were the apprehension well founded he still favored the bill.

[illegible]

[illegible] speakers who are [illegible] unreadable stuff on [illegible] started a scheme to [illegible] the Chinese [illegible] for the Chinese [illegible] that the supple[illegible] special order and [illegible] the tariff. CONGRESSIONAL FORECAST

Measures to be Considered by Congress the Coming Week—The Tariff Bill

WASHINGTON May 4—A motion to strike out the enacting clause of the Morrison tariff bill will be made Tuesday. It has not yet been decided who will make the motion. The republicans say if they can secure democratic votes by allowing the democrats to offer it they will agree to the motion being made by a representative of that party. Both sides declare the vote on the question will be close and each side is confident of its own success. The republicans are counting on gaining as many as forty five democrats and losing four or five of their own members. Friends still say the number of democrats who will vote with the republicans will not be as large as the latter anticipate. They count on a majority of from five to eight.

Proceedings in the house the latter part of the week will depend on the action which may be taken on the tariff bill Tuesday. If the friends of the measure are successful its discussion will be continued but under the five minute rule. Should its opponents succeed there will remain as unfinished business liable to come up the bill forfeiting the land grant of the Oregon Central railroad and bills providing for appropriations for public buildings throughout the country. The District of Columbia and the diplomatic and consular appropriation bills are in the house and may be called up any time. The house will adjourn at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon to attend ceremonies connected with the unveiling of the statue of Chief Justice Marshall.

IN THE SENATE

The shipping bill is unfinished business in the senate and Senator Frye who has it in charge hopes to secure a vote by Tuesday night.

The Indian appropriation bill will be the next taken up and may require two days to dispose of it. The agricultural and pension appropriation bills will be ready for action as soon as the Indian bill is disposed of.

Senator Hoar intends to ask that the next subject of general legislation to be considered may be the Mormon bill. It is however not likely to be reached this week.

When an opportunity presents itself Senator Blair will make an effort to secure consideration for the bill establishing a bureau of labor statistics but he will not antagonize the Mormon bill. He may find such opportunity during the morning hour.

Prominent democrats in congress say the business interests of the country are not to be neglected this season. [illegible] know well that their party is in an [illegible] majority in the house [illegible] it would fail [illegible] failure to deal with the several [illegible] of financial and other settlements which are urged by business interests everywhere and they say as soon as the tariff question is out of the way these measures will be taken up and disposed of as far as the house is concerned.

EFFORTS TO BE MADE

In the meantime and pending consideration of the tariff bill efforts will be made to pass two at least of those measures—one the Dingley bill to authorize the investment of lawful money held in the treasury for the redemption of notes of national banks whose affairs have been wound up and the other the McPherson senate bill to authorize the issue of circulating notes to national banks to an amount equal to the par value of bonds deposited by them with the United States treasurer to secure circulation. Dingley expects to be recognized in the house tomorrow for a motion to suspend the rules and pass the first named bill on passage and [illegible] direction of the banking and currency [illegible] will on the third Monday of the present [illegible] that committee is reached on the call [illegible] suspend the rules and take up the McPherson bill. As there are only two committees [illegible] banking and currency committee on the [illegible] suspected that the committee will be reached [illegible] named when the house will have an opportunity to dispose of the McPherson bill.

TARIFF TALK.

A Motion to be Made Tuesday to Strike Out the Enacting Clause of Morrison's Bill

WASHINGTON May 4—Special—The vote on the motion to be made next Tuesday to strike out the enacting clause of the Morrison tariff bill will be very close with the chances apparently in favor of the protectionists' defeat. The free traders [illegible] promised if the motion to strike out the enacting clause is lost to put out the free list [illegible] salt and lumber to the dutiable list and [illegible] those articles simply to the 20 per cent [illegible] Morrison has refused to accept Converse's [illegible] or to consent to a restoration of [illegible] on wool but it is understood that an opportunity will be given to test the sense of the house [illegible] question and if the majority favor restoring [illegible] chairman of the committee on ways and means [illegible] submit. It is expected that the necessary [illegible] votes to carry the bill will be cast by [illegible] tives from Alabama, California, Indiana, Maryland, Ohio and New York who have [illegible] until the present time to [illegible] agitation

RANDALL PREPARING A SPEECH

Randall thinks the chances are still in favor of striking out the enacting clause of the bill [illegible] he says the vote will be very close and the [illegible] uncertain. He has been engaged today [illegible] tion of a speech he will make Tuesday. He [illegible] temporary [illegible] and [illegible] the house [illegible] reasons for opposing agitation [illegible] tariff at the present time.

Hewitt of New York has prepared a far [illegible] which he will offer at the proper time [illegible] for the Morrison bill. Hewitt [illegible] in New York [illegible] but it [illegible] learned that [illegible] bill [illegible] [illegible] the free list and [illegible] such articles as in his opinion can [illegible] them without injury to home manufacturers. He has always been opposed to the horizontal reduction plan and will only vote for the Morrison [illegible] compelled to do so because reductions in [illegible] duties cannot be effected in any other way. If [illegible] it should decide to proceed with [illegible] of the Morrison bill other [illegible] of every [illegible] tion will be offered to it and at least a month will be consumed in debating and voting upon these amendments.

Failure of the Oriental Bank

SAN FRANCISCO May 4—The failure of the Oriental Bank of London is town talk in San Francisco. The bank of California formerly transacted a large exchange business with the Oriental bank but about three years ago transferred its accounts to [illegible] the [illegible] Thomas Brown secretary of the Bank of California said the failure involved £7 000 000 or $35 000 000 which the stockholders would be obliged to pay less the assets as they are responsible for deficiencies under the English law. The notes of Oriental bank are extensively circulated in China and India. The suspension evidently resulted from [illegible] advances to Oriental merchants.

TREVINO'S TROUBLE WITH THE GOVERNMENT

LAREDO May 4—Colonel Santa Benavides left New Laredo for Monterey this morning. From the fact that Benavides is a relative of President Gonzales and also a warm personal friend of General Trevino it is currently reported that his mission to Monterey is for the purpose of healing the breach now existing between the distinguished citizens of Mexico.

The associated press correspondent received a dispatch from General Trevino at Monterey to day saying "I can give assurance that the cordial relations between the supreme government of General Diaz and myself are as strong as ever and there has been no cause of discord. I protest against any statement to the contrary."

ESTIMATES OF THE TRIBUNE

The Tribune says All [illegible] New England states [illegible] Pennsylvania and the northwestern states except Ohio and Indiana may be considered reasonably safe for the republican ticket. Accepting the estimates of papers not friendly to Blaine the preferences of delegates elected from these states are [illegible] for Blaine 56 for Arthur 58 for Edmunds 46 for Logan [illegible] for Hawley and 12 scattering. The doubtful states are New York, Ohio, Indiana and the Pacific states. The reported preferences of delegates from these states are at least [illegible] for Blaine against [illegible] for the other five candidates or doubtful. The possible states are New Jersey, Maryland, West Virginia and Delaware. These give at least 41 for Blaine, against 11 for all other candidates. In the states expected to be democratic by the shotgun or otherwise Blaine appears likely to have less than one third of the delegates. Thus the delegates for Blaine represent the strongly republican or nearly balanced localities where votes to insure victory are to be obtained while the adverse votes come largely from democratic cities and [illegible]

The World figures up the victory for Blaine and says. He will stand better by seventy one votes before the convention than four years ago. The largest part of his increase comes from New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio. All the states which roll up a republican majority are unmistakably for him. He will have no difficulty in securing the votes of [illegible] republicans in the convention by his [illegible] earnestness and unscrupulousness

ESTIMATES AT WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON May 4—Special—Estimates of political [illegible] here upon the result of the first ballot at Chicago have reached a rather solid basis within the last twenty four hours. The lowest estimate of Blaine's strength is [illegible] and the lowest of Arthur's [illegible]. The highest of the two candidates is [illegible] and [illegible] respectively. It is now acknowledged on all sides that Blaine leads in the race and that if he does not receive the nomination at Chicago it will be prevented by something occurring between now and June [illegible]

One fact is spoken of by old politicians as significant. In 18[illegible] Blaine had no delegates from the states of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Connecticut and but [illegible] from New Jersey. In 1880 he had [illegible] from these states and [illegible] as he had [illegible] from the same states. This is referred to as showing that his popularity is growing in the [illegible] states. If Blaine has [illegible] delegates to the Chicago convention as estimated [illegible] by prominent congressmen who are working [illegible] he has forty [illegible] less than a sufficient number to nominate. [illegible] ballots before [illegible] break for Garfield [illegible] It appears that there [illegible] a more favorable [illegible] Blaine is nearer the nomination than [illegible] before

SATURDAY'S LOCAL NEWS.

From The Sunday Oregonian.

Michael Shatterly of East Portland was committed to the state insane asylum yesterday.

Alex Miller and L. S. Wilterwood announce themselves as independent candidates for justice and constable of Albina respectively.

The Merchant hotel was yesterday thrown open to the public. In the evening a reception was held by the proprietors at which some three hundred guests enjoyed the hospitality of this house destined to great popularity.

Judge J. D. Caton and wife of Chicago are passengers by the steamer due to-night. They have been spending several months in California, and will return home by the Northern. Judge Caton has several boyhood friends here, among them Mrs. Major Francis and Dr. O. P. S. Plummer.

G. P. Merrill, of Albina, was arrested the other day upon complaint of J. W. Talman, charged with abusive language. In court the prosecuting witness brought forward eight other persons to substantiate his complaint, but this they failed to do, and Justice Hackett accordingly dismissed the case.

UNSUSTAINED CHARGE.

Joseph Richardson, recently a resident of Albina, was arrested at Salem a few days ago upon a charge of forgery. When brought before a justice of the peace Richardson demanded an examination, which developed that there was not a particle of evidence to sustain the complaint. Accordingly he was discharged and the costs of the court—$37—were assessed to the complainant, Elson Kinsey.

GENERAL LAND AGENCY.

E. L. Shannon, formerly connected with THE OREGONIAN as traveling correspondent, has opened a general land agency at Victoria, B. C. Being well and favorably known throughout the northwest, and having especial facilities for handling extensive land properties, will render him a desirable man to the business interest of that city, to whom we can commend Mr. S. as reliable and possessed of good judgment in business matters.

MALTREATMENT CASE SET FOR TRIAL.

John Dillon, second mate of the ship T. F. Oakes, who was, on complaint of a sailor named O'Brien, incarcerated in the county jail in default of $1000 bail for alleged maltreatment while at sea, was arraigned before Judge Deady in the United States circuit court this morning, the information being filed. Dillon plead not guilty to the charge and the day of trial was set for Thursday, the 8th inst. Dillon is understood to be without money and it is not known who will defend him.

FOR OBTAINING MONEY UNDER FALSE PRETENSES.

F. L. Geiger was arraigned in Justice Greene's court yesterday on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. The case was continued until 2 P. M. Monday, and the defendant was released upon $500 bonds. Geiger is a son of Dr. Geiger, the well known physician of Forest Grove. Last October he obtained from H. C. Doty of this city $400 upon the understanding that he was to invest it in match wood. Doty alleges that he never intended to use the money for this purpose, but, or gambling, and lost it in this manner.

SCHOOL IN NATURAL HISTORY.

Prof. L. F. Henderson, of this city, proposes to establish at Hood river, Wasco county, a school for the study of natural history. It will open July 7 and close September 7. He will be assisted by Dr. Bolander, the principal collector of material for the Botany of California, and Prof. Johnson of the Seattle university. Two or more lectures will be delivered every week in the subjects of botany, zoology, invertebrates, and geology. This will be supplemented by continuous field work and by the use of the microscope. Numerous excursions will be made to the many hills, rivers and mountains of the neighborhood, for material for the classes.

SINGULAR ACCIDENT TO A HORSE.

Friday afternoon a horse attached to the delivery wagon of Kane's bakery became very much frightened and ran away in the south end of town. He plunged with tremendous force into a show window on South First street and a piece of glass was driven edgewise through the skull, midway between and a little below the eyes, the end touching the roof of the mouth. Another piece of glass was driven through the nasal channel into the nostril. The horse was taken to Mageon's stable and placed in a box stall. Dr. J. J. Smith, the veterinary surgeon, filed away part of the skull at the mouth of the wound and extracted the glass with forceps after much difficulty. Both wounds were sewed up and the animal bids fair to recover.

TENDER FOR THE DREDGER.

Yesterday afternoon the council committee on dredger opened bids for a tug boat to act as tender to the city dredger. They were as follows:

Smith Bros & Watson	$6,000
O. Clark & Co	[illegible]
G. Z. Mason & Co	[illegible]
Willamette Iron Works	7,250
F. Sorensen	[illegible]
W. W. Bates	5,975
Union Iron Works	[illegible]
John Pacquet	[illegible]
J. Honeyman & Co	[illegible]

The bids will be reported to the council next Wednesday evening for action. The tug is to be two feet longer than the Robert T. Lincoln, the tender to the government dredges two feet more beam and to have somewhat larger engines. As the Lincoln cost something like $5000, the lowest bid above mentioned is considered very low.

DEATH OF MRS. GOVERNOR ABERNETHY.

A dispatch from Colonel Hodge of New York city to Mr. Lloyd Brooke of Portland, states that Mrs. Ann Abernethy, widow of the late Governor Abernethy, the first Governor of Oregon territory, died at the former's residence on Friday. The deceased was married to Governor Abernethy in New York some time before the year 1840, when they came to this country via Cape Horn. Her maiden name was Pope, and she was a sister of Thomas Pope, an old time merchant of Oregon City. For a long time she and her husband lived at Green Point, on the Willamette river just below Oregon City, where he was engaged for years in the mercantile business. In 1865 they moved to this city where they lived at the time of the governor's death, a few years ago. Of their children, William Abernethy, now lives out on the macadam road, near the city, and another, Anna, is the wife of Colonel Hodges, at whose residence the old lady died.

RESIDENCE ROBBED OF JEWELRY.

The residence of W. J. Burns, manager for Balfour, Guthrie & Co., at the corner of Eighteenth and I streets, was entered by a burglar Friday night, or rather Saturday morning, and considerable jewelry belonging to his wife was taken. Mrs. Burns was awakened shortly before 5 o'clock in the morning by the noise of some one moving slowly and stealthily about the house. She jumped from her bed and ran to the head of the stairs just in time to see the form of a man descending the last step. He evidently knew he had been discovered, for he hastened out of the front door, which he had previously unlocked and left open purposely to make his escape in a hurry if necessary. It was not light enough for Mrs. Burns to distinguish whether the burglar was a white man or a Chinaman. Upon examination she found he had carried away a gold brooch, several small pins, a pair of bracelets, a pair of ear rings and considerable other small jewelry that lay on her dressing case. He evidently got into the house through a window that had heedlessly been left unfastened.

NOTABLE DEAD.

AN OLD HOTEL CLERK.

NEW YORK, May 3.—[Special.]—Dennis T. Caddigan, the oldest of the New York hotel clerks, died at the Sturtevant house yesterday, of apoplexy. In his room after death was found a pocketbook full of I. O. U.'s and some odd memoranda that no one can make out. "Among the I. O. U.'s," Leland said, "was one from a man to whom I lent $1000 in California in 1848. Old Cad had lent the fellow $500 to go out there with, and my $1000 brought him home to New York."

WASHINGTON.

The House Passes the Amendatory Chinese Exclusion Bill.

THE VOTE STANDS 181 AYES TO 13 NAYS.

Speeches for and Against the Measure—Text of Converse's New Tariff Bill—Congressional Notes.

House.

WASHINGTON, May 3.

On motion of Morrison the order for the evening was suspended, and the house then went into committee of the whole, Cox of New York in the chair, on the bill amending the Chinese immigration act.

Henley spoke in support of the bill, which, he said, was the joint product of the delegations from California, Oregon, Nevada, Arizona and Washington territory. Never had a measure received endorsement more nearly unanimous, or more earnest, than had this bill received from the people of the Pacific coast. While it might be assailed on the ground that in some way it was hostile to the universal fatherhood and equal brotherhood of man, while it might be criticised by those who had not studied its subject matter, there was the fact connected with it, that a people the full devotees of a tract of country still left for an empire, came with practical unanimity and demanded the enactment of this measure. Its opponents could not be acquainted with the civilization subject. It was civilization which presented the strange paradox of civilization without the slightest amelioration of humanity. The minority report intimated that the enactment of this law might break our friendly relations with England. This proposition he considered utterly baseless. England herself, in Australia, had enacted measures infinitely more restrictive in their provisions than any which can be found in the pending bill. England was not going to quarrel with us for doing what she had done herself. But if the apprehension were well founded, so momentous was this question, so far reaching in its results that he would still say let this measure pass. If amity with Great Britain was only to be purchased at the price of degradation of the laboring people it was too large a price for it. Congress could do nothing nobler than to answer no.

George said he would not enter into a discussion on the necessity of the passage of this measure. When the original act was before the house he had declared his views on the subject, and only wished now to reiterate his declarations in all their force and import. The people of the Pacific coast came before the Forty-sixth congress and pointed out some defects which time and experience had shown to exist in the original act. They asked for remedial legislation. He believed the provisions of the pending bill were absolutely necessary for the enforcement of the original act. That act did not provide for punishment in the case of its violation. If congress had the right to say certain persons should not enter this country, it had the right, and it was absolutely necessary that it should be exercised, to provide punishment for them if they did come. This pending bill did, and if that were the only provision in it it would merit the careful attention and favorable consideration of this house. He appealed to his side of the house to stand by the national interests of the Pacific coast. It was not a party measure with the people of that region. The people there were united. They looked on this measure as a matter of the very greatest importance to their advancement, prosperity and happiness in the future.

RICE'S SPEECH AGAINST THE BILL.

Rice opposed the bill. Referring to some remarks of Henley's relative to the religion of the Chinese, he quoted from a letter written him by a Chinese merchant, inclosing a subscription of $400 for the Garfield memorial hospital. He prayed his California friends to amend the act by providing that instead of passports men who had subscribed to the Garfield memorial fund should present their receipts for not less than $100 before they were permitted to come to this country, to view the hospital they had helped to build. Wu showed best the disciples of Confucius, who, forty five years before the Christian era, had written, "do not to others that which you would not wish them to do to you," or those who wear the sign of Jesus of Nazareth, though he feared they did not always exhibit the spirit of the Master in their acts.

Budd inquired whether the gentleman did now know that the Chinese had no regard for their daughters; did not even give them homes, and sold them into prostitution; that they sold their wives and killed their children?

Rice replied that he did not know more than half of that before. He knew there were many bad places in the world; some in China, some in San Francisco, some in New York, some, in a very slight degree, in Washington. Returning to consideration of the bill, he said that its heart and kernel was contained in the fifteenth amendment, which applied the provisions of the law to Chinese subjects of China or any other foreign power. That was all there was in the bill that was not puerile and frivolous. It was a "cowll and end all" bill. It was intended to exclude English Chinese from the United States. Where was the treaty right to do that? How long would England keep her treaties from the United States? If the United States should refuse her subjects, Chinese though they were, the right to set foot on our shores, did the gentleman think the English governor of Hong Kong would sit down and grant a Chinese sailor on an English vessel the ridiculous certificate which the bill required? Were the gentlemen ready, here and now, to enact this law, when its only provision would either be ignored as to their territory, or England be bound to war with this country? The law was petty in its details, preposterous in its attempt and impossible as to execution. The country ought to cultivate friendly relations with China in order to secure the advantages of trade and commerce. He warned the house not that the flag of war would cover the broad Pacific with its ships of war and conquest, but rather that which would cover it with white sails and the docked ships of commerce, and weave the favorable bonds of friendship and unity across the ocean. Let not congress build up on the Pacific coast a Chinese wall, with gates of entry only outwards, and cannon pointing without, but rather let from the high towers of Christian civilization the gentle light of science and philanthropy shine across the Pacific to illumine the dark places of old lands, where our race was born.

GLASSCOCK AND SUMNER.

Glasscock, in a brief speech, defended the bill from Rice's criticism, and expressed amazement at the misapprehension which existed in the eastern states as to the Chinese character. Notwithstanding the assertions of the gentleman from Massachusetts there was not an intelligent proposal to the law that was not based on sense and substantial reasons.

Sumner of California said the purpose of the bill was to perfect the law enacted two years ago, and remedy defects found to exist in it. He defended the propriety of that legislation on moral and religious grounds. He denied that the measure would not be presented if the Chinese had votes, and referring to Rice's quotation from the Argonaut said, "Frank Pixley, its editor, was the mouthpiece of the Central Pacific railroad, and doubly so any other corporation which would employ him," and that his paper was a disgrace to civilization.

VARIOUS SPEAKERS.

Hitt opposed the measure, as repugnant to the free institutions of the country, and denounced the inquisitorial system which was adopted toward the Chinese as more insulting than even Russia had adopted toward persons coming into her territory in times of dynamite terror.

Cassidy said the representatives of the Pacific coast, in asking congress to make the law effective, were simply recording the expressed will of both great political parties of the country, as expressed in their national conventions the last eight years. No Chinaman had ever came here as other emigrants, but because they loved liberty and hated oppression.

Tully supported the bill, and said if the gentleman from Massachusetts (Rice) would reside for a while in California he would change his views on the subject. He stated his personal experience with the Chinese, to show what they cared nothing for American institutions.

Keene and Lyman supported the bill.

Poland spoke against the bill.

Brown of Indiana was opposed to the bill, because it followed the same line of legislation as the original act and violated every idea he had of human rights. The bent of his internal legislation was that the men were not white. He recalled to a speech made by a distinguished member (referring to Cox of New York), in which he had referred to the negro as being low, ignorant, debased and degraded. Since the negroes had been made voters their characters had undergone a change in the opinion of the gentleman, and now to-night, and half and degrees under that gentleman sought to establish the fact that the negro was the wittiest, most social and cleverest persons in the world. [Laughter.]

COX MAKES A LITTLE SPEECH.

Cox of New York having left the chair replied to the last remark. He admitted that he had had some prejudices against the negro. The great Senator Morton had had them. Indiana had had them. The ablest of all representatives which Indiana ever sent, Jeremiah Wilson, in the forty-third congress, had brought in a bill and passed it, to break up government in the District of Columbia. They had got to steal it. Those states even spitfire from the legislature [illegible] a republican majority had taken away from them the right of voting. The negro was better than he used to think it in. He was kind, affectionate and gentle, and he liked the democratic party better than it used to. [Laughter.] He knew all about it from when Howard's rascalities were developed; when schemes connected with the Freedmen's bank were discovered; when republicans robbed them of their little money. Therefore he (Cox) said all had to Ethiopia. She stretched out her hands to the democracy, and the democracy was saying, "Come on, come on," to her children at Hamsey, "come at last to your refuge." [Laughter.]

Cox having resumed the chair, Brown asked leave to extend his remarks in the Record. He wanted to supplement them by the speech made by the gentleman (Cox) in 1864, on the negro question. [Laughter.]

LAMB FAVORS THE BILL.

Bratton and Pattison favored the bill.

Skinner (N. Y.) said he had opposed the original act because it was the most cowardly law any nation had ever placed on its statute books. He opposed this bill, as he had opposed its father, because it was small and narrow statesmanship; because it was unwise, because it approached political persecution, because it was a violation of existing treaties.

King favored the bill.

Lamb said he was proud to say no single democrat on the floor had lifted his voice today in behalf of the pauper labor of China and against the interests of the free labor of America. He was glad the opposition came from that side of the house which pretended always to protect American laborers. He was in favor of protection of the American laborer, whenever, wherever and under whatever circumstances he could do so. If he could protect him by keeping out pauper labor, either of China or Europe, without levying a tariff which took money out of the pocket of somebody else, so much the better for the people of America. He was not a free trader under any circumstances; was not in favor of placing the laborer of this country on a level with the laborer of a free trade country. Neither was he afraid of the red flag which the gentleman from Massachusetts had waved.

Guenther expressed a willingness to welcome to these shores everybody who came to escape oppression, but not those whose presence tended to degrade American labor.

THE BILL PASSES.

The bill was then read by sections for amendments.

Rice offered several amendments which were voted down.

Brumm offered an amendment, applying the provisions of the bill, as far as practicable, to persons from whatever nation imported to this country, under any system of contract. Ruled out on a point of order.

On motion of Hamilton an additional section was agreed to, providing that nothing herein contained be construed to affect any prosecutions, or other proceedings, civil or criminal, begun under the act of which this is amendatory.

Rice moved to amend the title so as to read "An act to violate our treaty stipulations with China and other governments." Lost.

The committee then rose and the bill passed—yeas 187, nays 13.

The negative votes were cast by Adams (Ill.), Brewer (N. Y.), Brown (Ind.), Everhart, Henderson (Ill.), Hitt, Kean, Price, Rice, Skinner (N. Y.), Smalls and Spooner. Adjourned.

CONGRESSIONAL CHIT-CHAT.

THE RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—The river and harbor committee are not expected to report their bill to the house until Monday. A sterate has arisen over the appropriation for the Missouri river, and members of that delegation have sent word that unless a more liberal appropriation is made for the river they will oppose and defeat the bill. They want $1,000,000. This proposition for reading reductions, so a proposition had been introduced in the committee to make a horizontal reduction of 20 per cent. on every appropriation so far made. At the earnest solicitation of Tully of California to-day before the closing of the bill the committee listened to an appeal from Mr. Sumner for an appropriation for dredging Redwood slough in San Mateo county. Dredging this slough will give a water route to San Francisco from Redwood City, and induce a schooner traffic between San Mateo and other bay cities. An appropriation was not recommended this year, but had been noticed in a previous report by the engineer. A statement setting forth the advantages of this improvement, prepared by Tully, was presented and after some debate it was agreed to allow $5000 for the purpose. Tully is much elated at his success.

REPORTED ADVERSELY.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—[Special.]—Garland reported adversely to the senate today the house bill making it a necessary qualification for governors of territories to be residents of the territories two years for appointment. This bill passed the house April 8, and is advocated by all the territorial delegates, especially by Brents and Oury, of Washington and Arizona. The senate committee, in their report, state their objection to the bill to be that it limits the discretion of the president in appointing governors in Arizona, Idaho, Dakota, Idaho, Montana, New Mexico, Wyoming and Washington, and they do not understand why it was not made to apply to all the territories. The present laws have stood for thirty-five years, and they cannot see any reason now for a change. Owing to the fact that residents of territories are sometimes mixed up in factional fights at home, it would render it often impossible to procure men free from schemes and local interest, who are qualified for governor, and for this reason alone they think the bill should be rejected.

THE MILITIA APPROPRIATION BILL.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—[Special.]—Hundreds of petitions from militia organizations all over the country have been received by the house, in favor of the bill reported favorably from the militia committee to increase the annual appropriation from $200,000 to $600,000. Substantially the same bill passed the senate, and is now pending before the house committee on appropriations. A good deal of pressure is being brought to bear upon Randall to prevail upon him to report the bill. The present appropriation of $200,000 per annum was fixed by act of congress in 1808; and, it is contended, and seems to be generally admitted, that this sum is insufficient for the militia now which has grown and extended with the growth of the country.

THE RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—The house committee on rivers and harbors to-day finished the river and harbor appropriation bill, with the understanding, however, that it may be changed at the final meeting on Monday morning. If any change is made the members say it will be a reduction of some of the most important appropriations. The total of the bill, as completed, is $12,411,000.

Bond Call.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—The secretary of the treasury has called for redemption 3 per cents. The following are the original numbers: Fifty dollars, Nos. 41 to 452, both inclusive; $100, Nos. 1 to 1520, both inclusive; $500, Nos. 3174 to 3175, both inclusive; $1000, Nos. 1580 to 1731, both inclusive, and Nos. 8360 to 8365, both inclusive; $5000, Nos. 10,950 to 11,171, both inclusive, and Nos. 21,695 to 22,142, both inclusive, $10,000, Nos. 22,376 to 25,953, both inclusive; total, $10,000,000. The bonds will be paid June 20, and interest will cease that day.

From the Bear.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Secretary Chandler has received the following telegram from First Lieutenant Emory, commanding the Greely relief steamer Bear: The ice conditions is considered favorable. The Thetis, the whalers Narwhal and Polynia left this week. The Polaris and the Arctic sail in a few days, all bound for northern waters. The early departure is due to the Greely reward, which they hope to secure.

CONVERSE'S TARIFF BILL.

A Measure Making a Horizontal Reduction of 10 per Cent.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Representative Converse has prepared the following amendment, which he will offer as a substitute for the Morrison bill. He made an attempt to have it read to have it printed in the Record, but it was objected. It will be done in order to [illegible] after the reading [illegible] Morrison's bill and [illegible] as follows:

Sec. 9. All acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed. This act shall take effect the 1st of July, 1884.

SPORTING NOTES.

FOR SAN FRANCISCO ON WHEELS.

NEW YORK, April 3.—[Special.]—Two two bicyclists, Woodside and Morgan, started from the city hall yesterday for San Francisco. The initial letters of each rider's name were stamped upon his skull cap, and floating from the fore part of each bicycle was a small blue and white flag, bearing the hopeful legend "San Francisco." The first stop was made last night at Princeton, and Philadelphia will be reached to-day.

ACCIDENTS.

FIVE MEN KILLED.

WATERTOWN, N. J., May 3.—The boiler in the Whitney marble works at Gouverneur exploded this forenoon, killing five men and fatally injuring two. The building is a total loss.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Steamship State of Florida Wrecked in the Atlantic.

THE DISASTER ATTRIBUTED TO DYNAMITERS.

An Estimate of the Strength of the Republican Candidate for President—Towns Destroyed by Forest Fires.

Ocean Steamer Wrecked.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Austin Baldwin & Co., agents of the State line of steamships, this morning received a dispatch from Glasgow, as follows: "The steamer Devon, New York for Bristol, picked up on April 27th two life boats of the State of Florida without occupants. A sailing vessel bound west signalled the steamer City of Rome, April 23d, in lat. 46, lon. 42. She had the shipwrecked crew of a State line steamer on board. The City of Rome arrived at Liverpool April 27th, from New York."

LONDON, May 3.—The captain of the Devon reports that he picked up two life boats of the State of Florida Sunday evening, in lat. 47, lon. 37. He feels certain the occupants were taken off by a passing vessel.

NEW YORK, May 3.—When the State of Florida had left this port a rumor was current that several of Rossa's agents were on board, with dynamite, and that detectives were awaiting the arrival of the steamer at Glasgow to arrest the men. This is confirmed by a cable from England. Rossa said he knew nothing of the men reported on board.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Among the passengers on the State of Florida were Mrs. E. Ward, of Cleveland, Henry Wood, Miss Lillian A. Wood, Mrs. L. Wood, M. E. Wood, and Miss May Schmidt, of Ohio, J. H. Walter King and James G. Graham, of [illegible], Andrew Cruikshank, of Bradford, Pennsylvania, Andrew Farns, Thomas Wilkinson, Thomas Taylor, jr., Miss Amy Taylor, Mrs. T. Taylor, Mrs. Annie Taylor, Miss Ada Taylor and Abraham Williamson, of Chicago; George Elliott and A. Bethune, of Toronto.

GLASGOW, May 3.—The managers of the State line believe there was an accidental explosion of dynamite on the State of Florida. It is believed dynamiters were among the passengers.

The Suspended Oriental Bank.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Ludlow & Co., correspondents here of the Oriental bank in London, state that very little American exchange is involved in the failure. The Oriental Galaxy in bank transferred its business to Rothschild a year ago. Large crowds have collected about the bank, and excitement prevails. Bank shares are quoted at a discount of 37 per cent. The failure of the Oriental bank does not affect the stock exchange, but Mincing Lane suffers, as the bank was interested in eastern produce.

Stocking the Streams.

OSWEGO, April 3.—[Special.]—Another batch of fry from the state hatchery at Caledonia, consisting of 50,000 Pacific coast trout and 50,000 brook trout, will be deposited in the Oswego river and the streams in this vicinity today.

Astor's Yacht Launched.

WILMINGTON, Del., May 3.—Astor's new steel yacht Nourmahal was launched to-day. It is said to be the largest pleasure vessel ever launched in America, and the largest yacht afloat.

THE FIRE RECORD.

Great Damage Done by Forest Fires in Eastern States—Several Villages Destroyed.

VILLAGE DESTROYED.

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., May 3.—The entire village of Gilman's Depot on the Port Jervis and Monticello railroad burned yesterday afternoon and last night. The residents were obliged to fly for their lives, being unable to save anything. Not over half a dozen houses are standing in a radius of five miles. The fire is still burning. Gilman's tannery and saw mill were destroyed. The whole settlement is owned by him. Loss, $100,000. Two railroad bridges were burned.

BIG BLAZE AT DETROIT.

DETROIT, May 3.—At an early hour this morning fire broke out in a building occupied by a steam supply company, and burned with great fury for over two hours, before subdued. It completely gutted that building, containing a battery of twenty boilers, and a large amount of coal. The aggregate losses are not far from $150,000, well insured.

MINING TOWN BURNED.

ELMIRA, N. Y., May 3.—A report comes from the coal mining town of Arnot, Tioga county, Penn., that about a score of dwellings and both the mining stores were burned to-day. They were ignited by forest fires raging in that section. Elmira sent fire men and apparatus. The homeless families find shelter at Blossburg.

THE BLUE MOUNTAINS BURNING.

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 3.—The Blue mountains, along the northern border of Berks county, are on fire in every direction. Serious danger is apprehended. The destruction of woodland is incalculable. No farm houses are yet burned. People are fighting the flames.

TOWN PARTLY CONSUMED.

ALTOONA, Pa., May 3.—The town of Bradden, Clearfield county, was partially destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. It is the large lumber yard and mill of Hooker, Bradden & Co. The loss is estimated at $100,000 to $150,000, fully insured.

THE STOCK MARKET.

A Day of Fluctuation in Wall Street—Closing Quotations.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Governments quiet. Stocks opened firm and higher, and advanced 1/4 to 1 1/2, Central and Union Pacific and Western Union being firmest. After the first call a weaker feeling developed, Union Pacific breaking 1 3/4, Central Pacific [illegible] and the general list 1/4 to 1/2. Subsequently, under the [illegible] prices advanced 1/4 to 1 per cent. Missouri Pacific was the chief conspicuous. Afterwards, Michigan, Northwestern and Canada Southern were particularly weak, due to a drive by room traders. The general market prices receded. [illegible] Missouri Pacific being the greatest sufferer. At 2 P. M. the market was firm again, but near the close Western Union sold down to 58, but the market left off about steady.

Exports of specie for the week aggregate $3,130,000, making a total since January of $41,170,000, against $5,557,997 the same time last year.

CRIMINAL CALENDAR.

A FAMILY TRAGEDY.

KANSAS CITY, May 3.—Times' Harrisonville, Mo., special: James Maxwell, aged 27, a druggist, living at West Line, Cass county, shot Elward Lator, his brother-in-law, dead at 8 o'clock last night. He fired through a window of the former's house. Lator's wife and three small children remained alone in the house all night, fearing to venture out. This morning an alarm was given and scouting parties went out. Meanwhile, Maxwell had gone to Paola, Ks., but returned on the train. He was arrested, and now is under the protection of a guard. Feeling runs high and threats of lynching are frequent. The trouble, it is understood, grew out of attentions paid Lator's sister by young Maxwell.

A DARING ROBBER CAPTURED.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Five men jumped on the front platform of the street car at Eleventh street and Waverly place last night and threw the driver, Thomas Jefferson, over the dash board under the horses' feet. They then snatched his money box containing $11 and ran off. The passengers shouted for police and after chase, during which several shots were exchanged, one of the robbers, Charles Miller, was captured.

ACCIDENTS.

POWDER MILLS BLOWN UP.

SCRANTON, Pa., May 3.—The barrel mill, press house, wheel room, mill of the Moosic Powder Company, Colonel H. M. Boies president, blew up, destroying all the pressing and pulverizing mills, fired at 1 o'clock to-day. The mills ignited from forest fires. The company have been fighting the fire for several days. One employe was burned to a crisp in the wash house. Several hundred casks of powder which are now burning. It is expected that the glazing mills will go. The iron magazines, containing several thousand pounds of powder, are safe so far. No one dares travel the road to Archbald for fear the rest of the mills will blow up. Loss thus far $30,000.

RAILROAD NOTES.

EASTWARD MATTERS.

ST. LOUIS, May 3.—The Transcontinental association hold a meeting Monday next to determine whether the California pool to continue or be abandoned. Tuesday the Iowa traffic association will meet here. On April 21 the Wabash gave the required thirty days' notice of withdrawal from the association. According to Commissioner Comman to this notice the general managers of the roads in interest, that the association will cease to exist the 21th of May. It is thought, however, by some interested railroad officials here that an effort will be made to continue the California association without the Wabash.

TELEGRAPHIC SPARKS.

It is reported that there is a new outbreak in Madagascar.

From London it is announced that Gen. Gordon is dead.

Advices from Sydney state that Hanlan rowed Laycock May 22.

Two hundred and seventy-one Italian laborers have arrived at Ontario from New York to replace the places of the strikers on the Ontario and [illegible] railway.

PROCLAMATION.

To the Hustlers from the West.

You came to Oregon to make money. Of course you did! The chances are good you'll do it, but they are no where else so good as at LACAMAS, W. T.

The new manufacturing town, located on the Columbia river, fourteen miles east of Portland. There is room for traders, in all lines, for manufacturers, speculators, farmers, dairymen and everybody else.

Take notice that this is not a town site boom, gotten up on some future railroad or terminus speculation, but the actual development of a splendid water power by monied men for the money there is in it and that work has been going on for a year.

To control the water a few thousand acres of farm lands had to be bought. This the water power company does not desire to keep, and it is offered for sale in lots to suit. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are to be invested immediately in various manufacturing enterprises to use the water power. A paper mill now being built will employ 150 hands, a saw mill and a grist mill will bring the trade of a large and fine agricultural country. There is room and opportunity to develop a real western town of 10,000 inhabitants in a few years.

This is an advertisement, of course, but if you'll come and see me I will prove to you it's no humbug, and show you a way to make some gold dollars and a home.

Take the steamer Dixie Thompson at the foot of Ash street, or the Calliope at the foot of Morrison street, Portland. Fare, $1.

ENGLAND.

THE ALLEGED DYNAMITERS ARRESTED.

BIRMINGHAM, May 3.—Daly, Egan and MacDonnell were arraigned in the police court to-day on a charge of treason felony. Daly was defiant, and MacDonnell was dejected. Daly asked why he was brought to Birmingham to be tried again, after his acquittal Thursday to await the Chester assizes. The prosecution replied that after the charge was prepared against him at Liverpool enough evidence was brought to light to justify his removal to Birmingham on graver charges.

DYNAMITE DISCOVERED.

LONDON, May 3.—The proprietors of a shipdavern in the vicinity of the Strand seized the effects of an absconding lodger and discovered a box containing twelve pounds of dynamite cartridges and gun cotton. The lodger is well known and the police are tracking him. The premises will be searched.

LONDON, May 3.—The police attach very little importance to the dynamite discovery at the ship tavern. The cartridges are such as are used to load pistols.

LIVERPOOL GRAIN MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, May 3.—Breadstuffs quiet. Corn [illegible] Wheat, red winter, 7s 1d; No. 1 white, 7s [illegible] spring, 7s 5d; California, 7s [illegible] In corn there is not much doing.

CANADA.

DISCOVERY OF GOLD.

TORONTO, May 3.—[Special.]—There has been great excitement in Kingston during the past few days over a discovery of gold in large quantities at Kaladar, about fifty miles from Kingston. The gold was found in pockets on the farm of Mr. McLaughlin, by miners who were engaged in blasting rock to a stream that runs through his property. During the first half day the people found over $100 worth of the precious metal. Dr. [illegible] is now flocking to Kaladar with [illegible].

SPAIN.

ATTEMPT TO BLOW UP A TRAIN.

MADRID, May 3.—A train was stopped by a cartridge outside Barcelona to-day by [illegible] from passing over the bridge, upon which dynamite cartridges had been placed. Seditious placards were found posted on the walls of the town of Lepida.

THE WEST INDIES.

ENGLISH VESSEL DESTROYED BY NATIVES.

BOSTON, May 3.—It is reported from Port au Prince that the English schooner [illegible] was burned by natives at Cay Island, fifty miles north of [illegible] and the crew murdered. A war vessel has been sent there.

TWO FISHERMAN DROWNED NEAR ASTORIA.

The Advance in the Price of Beef.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 3.—[Special.]—Market reports sent to THE OREGONIAN from week to week have shown a gradual advance in the price of beef in this market. A prominent meat dealer was asked the cause to-day and answered: "The present high price of beef is entirely due to the scarcity of marketable cattle. A year ago last winter wholesale butchers of this city purchased largely of Nevada cattle, paying 7 and 8 cents a pound for them. These had to be fed two or three months before it was fit for market, and this was done at heavy cost. Finally, when the stock was ready for market, there was plenty of beef, and the dealers were obliged to unload the Nevada stock at a slight advance over the purchase price, and at a heavy loss. I know of in this city lost $2,000 on 800 head of this stock. The result was that this year hardly any cattle were [illegible], and consequently the supply is inadequate to the demand. The lightness of the supply may, in a measure, be attributed to the lateness of the season. This year we had, you all remember, no rain until the end of January, and stock suffered somewhat in the southern portion of the state as well as in the San Joaquin country from drought. The present high prices will not continue much longer. In a few months fewer country cattle will be ready for market and prices will drop."

The Thayer Murder Case.

[Special.]—The examination of Amasa Thayer, charged with the murder of Isaac Abbott, a brother [illegible], was commenced in the police court yesterday. The latter made a strong argument, claiming that as the shot was accidental there could be no murder. The case was taken under advisement until to-day.

Police Judge Webb to-day dismissed the charge of murder against Amasa Thayer, who accidentally shot Isaac Abbott in a row with Fredsham at a meeting of the Dashaway society.

Restaurants Advance their Prices.

[Special.]—A sharp advance in restaurant rates went into effect in this city on the 1st. By mutual agreement, and under a $500 forfeit, all the two bit houses have raised their rates to 35 cents. The plea of the proprietors is that for a year they have been making nothing.

STATE DISPATCHES.

Washington County Politics.

HILLSBORO, May 3.—[Special.]—At the mass convention of Democrats of Washington county, held to-day, on a motion to adjourn without putting out a ticket, and on the ayes and nays being called, the chair was in doubt. An accusation was made that republicans were voting. A rising vote was ordered and the motion was carried unanimously. The motion was to adjourn, to meet the people next Saturday to put out a ticket.

The political situation is somewhat complicated in Washington county this year, and but one thing appears certain; that is Bennett will receive a very large majority for judge.

A Tennessee Forger Arrested.

ASTORIA, May 4.—[Special.]—Sheriff Twombly arrested to-day a man named Kennedy, wanted in Tennessee for forgery committed about a year ago. Kennedy is a stranger here, and recently started in the saloon business. It is reported that $1200 reward is standing for his arrest.

The party arrested for forgery committed at Knoxville, Tenn., is named Madison Cahill. The amount of the forgery is $2500. It seems his father died and left that amount of cash to three brothers, and Madison forged a check, drew all and absconded. He has $1500 in Case's bank, besides his interest in the saloon.

Two Fishermen Drowned.

[Special.]—Two boats capsized in the breakers on the bar yesterday evening and two men were drowned. The boats drifted in on Sand island, and the other two men succeeded in clinging to their boats. The saved men have not yet returned to Astoria. The names of the lost are not yet ascertained.

A Sacrilegious Thief Captured.

Chief of Police Loughery succeeded to-day in his efforts to discover the sacred sacramental service, stolen from the Presbyterian church. It is recovered and the thief is in jail.

MONTANA.

Three Men Drowned in Clark's Fork.

THOMPSON'S FALLS, M. T., April 30.—[Special Correspondence.]—Last Monday morning four men left here in a small boat to go down the Clark's Fork en route to Lake Pend d'Oreille. The next forenoon they went as far as Weeksville, attempting to run the rapids, and capsized. Three of them were drowned. The fourth man, [illegible], was thrown [illegible] stuck to the swamped boat, and after riding the rapids managed to paddle the boat to the river bank, and thus saved himself to tell of the sad fate of his comrades. The names of the three men that were drowned are: Jim Phillips, known as Big Cooper, from Marysville, [illegible] a private [illegible] infantry, also deputy sheriff at Missoula; James O'Dell, a carpenter by trade, of Memphis, Tenn.; and [illegible], a young man who had twenty men, from Quincy, Ill. [illegible] says that the fate of the men would never have been known. He states that O'Dell was swimming to shore all right and would have got out, but when Larque cried for help O'Dell swam back to assist him. He clung to O'Dell and they both went down together. When the boat dashed by Phillips, Larque threw him the end of a rope. Phillips reached for the rope, but it fell six or three feet short of him, and the swirling waters drove them apart. That was the last Larque saw of the three. After he got ashore he ran up the river to try and assist the men, but could see no traces of them. O'Dell was known to have over $1000 in his pockets, and a gold watch and chain. The Clark's Fork is a dangerous river to try to run, on account of its many rapids. Many a poor fellow has lost his life in its cruel waters, whose sad fate has never been known. It was at Rock island where so many men mysteriously disappeared, when the little steamboat Katie Hallett was being built there, and the front of construction of the Northern Pacific railroad was at that point.

Indian Killed by a White Man.

Last Sunday evening at Thompson Falls Hi Perry, a gambler, shot and killed an Indian known as Spokane Jim. The Indian had been drinking and he and Perry were playing a game of seven up when the Indian, thinking it was not on the square, quit the game and started to go out of the saloon. When he got to the door Perry hit him several times in the face. The Indian then pulled his knife and drew back as if to strike. Perry went into the saloon and got his pistol and the Indian started up the street, but when he saw Perry again come to the door he returned and again pulled his knife. Perry then shot him through the chest. He turned around to walk off and Perry shot him twice in the back. He fell just off the sidewalk. After a short time other Indians came and carried him off a dead Indian. Nothing has been done over the matter as yet, but some white man will have to die for that dead Indian.

Eddy, Hammond & Co., of Missoula intend putting up a large warehouse and starting a wholesale house at this point.

Montana Republican Convention.

HELENA, M. T., May 3.—The Independent's Bozeman special reports a spirited contest in the territorial convention. Gov. Crosby leads the friends of President Arthur, and Colonel Sanders those of Blaine. Neither has a majority, the balance of power being held by Edmunds men. The convention, which met yesterday at 3 P. M., was unable to effect an organization until 11 P. M. The Edmunds men secured a chairman by uniting with the Blaine men. The candidates were named for delegates to the national convention, from which two are to be selected. An informal ballot stood: Arthur men 23, scattering 29. The indications are that the delegation will be divided between Blaine and Edmunds.

The Blaine and the Edmunds men united this morning, and elected the delegation to Chicago. The delegates are Colonel Wilbur F. Sanders of Helena, and Lee Mantle of Butte.

Trial of Indians.

MILES CITY, May 3.—In the trial of Black Wolf, a Cheyenne chief, and his associates, for burning the Anderson ranch, Black Wolf was found not guilty. Howling Wolf and White Bear and two others pleaded guilty, and as there was no excitement, as it is understood that the others were equally as guilty as they. Each will be sentenced to five years.

Permanent officers for the Pullman Farmer's Association have been elected as follows: T. F. Burgess, president; Wm. H. Ashpaw, vice-president; E. E. Ellsworth, recording secretary; O. Q. Martin, corresponding secretary; J. Crawford, treasurer; B. F. Taylor and E. E. Ellsworth, delegates. The association has a membership of twenty-four, and is receiving new accessions almost every day.

A Colfax reporter visited, a few days ago, Louis Knott, the murderer of Thomas Higgins. He found Knott in a very despondent mood. He admits that the evidence against him is very strong, and his only hope lies in being able to prove where he was on that eventful Sunday evening. He is engaged in writing a history of so much of his life as he can remember, from which he hopes deductions may be made in his favor.

Since the first part of January Seattle has received for licenses of all kinds the sum of $8697 78. Of this amount, $2269 35 were received during the month of April, which was an unusually heavy month in that line. There were issued during the month 3 wholesale liquor licenses, 16 retail, 5 grocery, 4 billiard table, 2 pigeon-hole table, 40 vehicle, 6 exhibition, 2 peddler's, 1 runner's, and 4 auctioneer's, the total number of licenses issued being 89. The largest revenue was derived from the issuance of retail liquor licenses, which yielded $1950.

The Masonic fraternity of Vancouver have decided to put up a fine brick building at the corner of Eighth and Main streets. It will be fifty feet front, eighty feet deep, two stories and basement. The upper story will be used for lodge rooms. The ground floor will be fitted up as a public hall, with stage and all necessary appurtenances. The basement will be finished up and used for supper rooms, etc. Work on the excavation has already commenced, and the building will be completed at as early a date as possible.

The other night, says a Walla Walla exchange, about twenty-five soldiers imbibed too much beer, and while under the influence of hop juice attempted to run the town. When the fire alarm was sounded the soldiers broke for the engine houses, grabbed the trumpets and assumed the management of the department until Chief Crane knocked one of the fellows in the head with his horn. The mob then attempted to rob Wolff & Clapp's till, but were checked by the police and a few resolute men. The soldiers said they would run the town from now on, but upon the fact being made known to General Grover, that officer made up his mind that he would have to be consulted in the matter.

Wednesday afternoon a lad about 7 years of age came near meeting with a serious if not fatal injury. It appears that the boy, who was standing by the side of the track, noticed a light construction hand car coming toward him at full speed. The lad waited until the car was within a few yards, when suddenly he threw himself between the rails. The men on the hand car tried to stop the pumps, but before they could thoroughly realize the situation the car had passed over the boy. The little fellow remained immovable where he had thrown himself until the men, who had succeeded in stopping the car, came up to him, when the boy attempted to stand up but could not do so, having been struck in the back by the working gear of the car. He was carried to his home, which is close to the depot, and turned over to the care of his parents.

The trial of A. J. Leonard for the murder of his brother-in-law, Ambrose Patton, in November, 1882, will take place at Kalama this week. Some of the particulars are familiar, but the following developments are claimed by the defense: O. Olsen and A. O. Clarke are said to be implicated in the case, and it is alleged that they have subscribed several hundred dollars in support of the prosecution of Leonard. Clarke's wife is said to have been too intimate with Patton, and on one occasion she left her husband and went to Portland, and it is conceded by some of her friends that Patton paid her expenses for the trip. Patton, as has been stated before, acted the leech on his alleged murderer's father, and in the September preceding his death threatened to hurt the Leonard family if money was not forthcoming to support him. The case will probably occupy but little time, though it will be hotly contested.

The farmers on the Snohomish river are seriously alarmed over the threatened destruction of the cherry crop in the valley. The Eye says: Numerous reports of the threatened destruction of the cherry crop have come to us from fruit growers in this vicinity. About the time cherry trees first commenced to blossom, large flocks of birds resembling that little pest commonly known as the cherry bird, made their appearance and commenced cutting off the blossoms and feeding upon the germ of the fruit. A flock of them would in a few minutes almost entirely strip a tree, it being estimated that one bird would cut from seventy five to a hundred blossoms in a minute. The birds attack only those trees that have newly blossomed, and do not trouble those from which the blossoms have commenced to fall, and it is a curious fact that cherry trees are the only ones molested. In some orchards the cherry crop will be a total failure. Whether this is the only section visited by them we have not ascertained.

The democrats at Boise chose Joe Oldham of Ada county and John M. Silcott of Nez Perce as delegates to the Chicago national convention for nominating a democratic candidate for the presidency.

Boise river was higher Wednesday than ever known before at this time of the year. Should the next two rises be in proportion it will do much damage. The snow in the high mountains have hardly yet started.

A convict named Foster escaped from the Boise penitentiary on Monday evening. A watch was placed on the Boise bridge, and while attempting to cross it during the night he was recaptured and returned to his old quarters.

Lewiston regards as a favorable omen the possession of a railroad tie which floated down Snake river from the scene of operations up the river and was secured as a memento and a harbinger of the final completion down to that expectant city of the O. R. L. railroad.

Lewiston Teller: Mr. Singiser writes a letter stating that he had interviewed the secretary of war, who informed him that the Lapwai Post would not be abandoned. The telegraph office here received information, officially, that this post would not be abandoned.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

The total tax levy in Boston this year is estimated to reach $12,460,000, an increase of over $[illegible] over last year, or an advance of about 25 per cent. This will necessitate a rate of $18 per $1000, the highest previous rate being $15 60.

President Arthur favors building a new mansion on Lafayette Square opposite the White house, for the strictly private home of the chief magistrate, and retaining the old White house for the executive offices and for holding official and public receptions, dinners, etc.

It is stated in literary circles that the title of George Alfred Townsend's long promised romance is "The Entailed Hat; or, Patty Cannon's Times." The title is sufficiently odd to excite curiosity. The book will be issued soon by a prominent eastern publishing house.

There are 100,000 deaths yearly in London, and all the bodies are buried in the surface soil around the city, that is, in thirty years, 3,000,000 bodies. In twenty years, says Sir Spencer Wells, a body becomes clay, and London has, therefore, [illegible] 2,000,000 bodies undergoing "harmful decay."

General Grant's old home in Mount Pleasant, Ohio, has been photographed for the State Historical society. This is the house in which the General was born. In the foreground in this picture is a full length portrait of the venerable Dr. J. G. Rogers, the family physician, who was in attendance at the birth of General Grant.

Senator Edmunds' position on the presidency is telegraphed to the Boston Herald, is said to be this: He does not want the nomination, but will accept it if named under proper conditions. He is stated also to have expressed an intention, a short time ago, of writing a letter absolutely declining the use of his name, but was persuaded not to do so by a friend.

The committee of the anti music faction of the United Presbyterian church has decided to ask the general assembly to declare the use of instrumental music unlawful on the ground that the question was not properly submitted to the presbyteries. A renewal of the fight over the question at the meeting of the general assembly in St. Louis this month is predicted.

Egypt is likely to be auctioned off at a sheriff's sale before long. It is announced by England in a note to the powers that it will take at least $40,000,000 to relieve the land of the Ptolemies from its immediate financial necessities. This lump added to the vast sum for which every available source of revenue is already bonded will about clean things out, and the Sphinx had better take the pyramids and move off the premises.

Mr. Blaine, after a pause (reflectively)—"Abigail, I think you may go on with our history."

BUSINESS AND THE PRESIDENCY.

Why any Democratic President is to be Regarded with Apprehension.

New York Times.

We should regard a democratic administration, no matter who might be its nominal head, with very serious apprehensions. The way to avoid it, however, is not simply to preach union in the party and the subordination of individual preferences to the general good. The way is to give the party a candidate and a platform that will secure union, and for that achievement the business men of the country possess a great influence. The question is not one of "harmonizing" various contending factions. It is a question of a faction on one side and a body of earnest and disinterested republicans on the other. If the independents were only a faction, if they were office-hunters or scheming politicians, some compromise of the old-fashioned sort might be possible. But as they have no personal interests at stake, as they ask nothing but the chance to work for the party with a clear conscience, nothing can "harmonize" them with the spoilsmen. What they require is what the old party needs and what the business interests of the country especially need—simply a fit candidate on an honest platform.

The danger from a democratic administration arises from two facts. One is that the tendency of the party as to finance is hopelessly bad; the other is that the party is given over to the spoils system. There are prominent men in the party who are sound on finance and some who detest the spoils system, but they do not represent their party and they could not control it were it to come into power. The party would never repeal the silver law or develop, or even maintain, the civil service reform law. Democratic administration would compel a general upsetting in the federal service, and would involve much confusion and possible peril to business affairs. If the business men of the country cannot afford this—and they certainly cannot—the way to prevent it is open. It is to use their influence steadily and openly against the nomination of a weak and unfit candidate by the republican party. There has not been a time in many years when so much legitimate power was in their hands, when a failure to use it would have been of greater advantage to them.

General Grant's Position.

Philadelphia Record.

The silly ghost of Grant imperialism, or "the man on horseback," is conjured up once more to frighten republicans into the camp of Blaine. A third term of Grant would afford the country a far better guarantee of peace and good government than a term of the Maine statesman. But the politicians who engineered the Grant movement four years ago have not the slightest disposition to renew it. General Grant has put himself out of the atmosphere of political intrigue, and ought to be let alone.

An Object of Veneration.

Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Mr. Blaine is now known in the revered character of a retired statesman, a writer of entertaining recollections of his own times and a laggard on the stage of activity, whose presence will long be pardoned for his many graces and charms in personal intercourse. In this character, he will enjoy much love, high honor and enthusiastic admiration, from which few men have the disposition or are under obligations to detract.

CONVENTIONS AND CANDIDATES.

The showing to date on the roll of delegates to the republican national convention only discovers the fact that no candidate has a majority nor, in all probability, a number that approaches a majority. Partisans of the several candidates, especially those supposed to be the leading ones, do their best to make an exhibit of strength for their favorites. Bearing this in mind the reader will do well not to accept the statement that any candidate has a number that places the nomination almost within his reach. Individual judgment is one thing; collective judgment another. The canvasser for a candidate, seeing the delegates separately, may feel entirely sure that their votes will go for his man; but when the delegates assemble and act together, a different spirit begins to act upon their deliberations. Personal influences have less weight, individual feeling is modified, and the result is a collective judgment over which a sort of instinct of reason or wisdom prevails. This has been the case in former republican conventions. It gave Lincoln to the party and the country in 1860 and Garfield in 1880, settling in both cases a dispute as to candidates which had become almost acrimonious, and settling it in a way that produced entire satisfaction and led to complete success.

Blaine undoubtedly will have the lead in the convention—in case his name is presented—though Arthur will be very little behind him. Friends of Blaine are beginning to raise the objection to Arthur's following that it is mostly from the south, where no republican electoral votes are to be had; and there is something in this objection as an argument against Arthur's nomination, though it by no means establishes the whole case for Blaine because, first, the united vote of the sure republican states cannot be counted in convention for him, and second, his own roster of delegates is largely swelled by lists from states which can no more be counted republican than some whose delegates are placed in the Arthur column. Massachusetts, Vermont and Connecticut will furnish no votes for Blaine at any stage of the contest; Illinois is for Logan; half of Ohio is for Sherman, and votes for Arthur or Edmunds are reported from such solid republican states as New Hampshire, Minnesota, Nebraska, Michigan and Wisconsin. To show too that the objection to Arthur's vote, namely, that much of it is from the democratic states, will lie also, though in less degree, against the vote counted for Blaine, it is necessary only to note that in the table prepared by Blaine's managers votes are counted for him from Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Kentucky, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia and New Jersey, states out of which no republican candidate can expect a single electoral vote.

We have intimated a doubt whether Blaine will actually be a candidate before the convention. It is apparent to all that he has been playing a deep game for the nomination; but, as he has steadily declared that he was not a candidate, he is in a position to forbid the use of his name in case he finally makes up his mind that the convention is against him. He has been defeated in two conventions, and does not want to take even a risk of a third defeat. If the convention appears to be his own he will take the nomination, but it is hardly probable that he will enter the convention to make a doubtful struggle for it.

On the democratic side the presidential question is extremely quiet. This is due to several causes. The republican convention is first in order of time by five weeks, and it therefore just now monopolizes attention. Again, the opinion is very general, even among democrats, that if the republican convention makes no mistake in the selection of candidates, the chances of success on the democratic side will be small. The thing, therefore, for the democrats to do now is to wait and see what the republicans will do. In the democratic market, consequently, there will be little animation till after the republican convention. Besides, that party does not see its way clear to any adjustment of its differences on the tariff question. It cannot agree in congress; will it precipitate the question upon its national convention? The tendency of its thought at the present time is to renominate "the old ticket," and try to set up this ghostly reminiscence as a substitute for a platform based on the issues raised by its own members during the present session of congress. Tilden, it is apparent, can have the nomination if he wants it, maugre his age and decrepitude, Tammany's hostility, the cipher dispatches, and all the other reasons which caused him to be set aside by his party four years ago.

An effort is being made to obtain commutation of the sentence of Murray the murderer. A number of persons have asked, or are about to ask, the governor to save him from the gallows and send him to the penitentiary for life. In justice he ought to be hanged; and his miserable life is not worth prolongation. It can be of no use to himself and only a curse to the state and to his fellow men. Moreover, if he is sent to the penitentiary he will not stay there. Efforts will at once begin to get that penalty remitted. Even if the present governor should refuse, the next one would be told that Murray was a poor unfortunate man who didn't know what he was about when he committed the murder; that his health was positively forbidding his longer incarceration, and that if his life was to be prolonged he must be set free—just as if there ever was or ever could be any possible reason for prolonging his worthless, drunken, vagabond and criminal existence. The person who supposes the executive will not yield doesn't take into account the habit and practice of Oregon governors. Again, there is no good sense in charging the state with the support of this vile wretch, even for a year. It has nothing for him to do and no room to keep him. Those who are interesting themselves so deeply in behalf of this vile criminal, and are so anxious to save him to the world, see innocence and virtue contending every day for existence and borne down in the struggle for honorable life, without being moved to the smallest touch of compassion. The modern fashion is sympathy for criminals and stony hearts for the needy virtuous and worthy, to succor whom would not only be justice and charity, but would give the world lives that would be to it a perpetual benefaction.

There is talk now of a "fusion" ticket in Multnomah, to be composed of democrats and republicans in equal numbers. It has a starter in dissatisfaction about the bonanza offices, but it is said will extend also to legislative nominations. A good many efforts of this kind have been made in Multnomah, but their history has not been an unbroken record of success. Not many persons are much interested in the feelings of those who are disappointed about the paying offices of the county; and those who take an interest in the success of the republican party are likely to inquire why they should join at this time in a movement which, if it succeeds, will give the democrats four or five members of the legislature from a republican county, may probably make the legislature democratic, and give that party the United States senator.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE COCOA NUT.

The May number of the Popular Science Monthly contains an article by Grant Allen, in which that charming writer undertakes to account for the milk in the cocoanut—"that occult problem which has engaged the profoundest interest alike of ingenious infancy and of maturer scientific age." "The office of the cocoanut water," he says, "is the deposition of the nutty part around the side of the shell; it is, so to speak, the mother-liquid from which the harder, eatable portion is afterward derived. This state is not uncommon in embryo seeds. In a very young pea, for example, the inside is quite watery, and only the outer skin is at all solid. But the special peculiarity of the cocoanut consists in the fact that this liquid condition of the interior continues even after the nut is ripe, and that is the really curious point about the milk in the cocoanut which does actually need accounting for." The author goes on to show that to break its fall from the high palm, or rather to prevent its fall from breaking it, the cocoanut has surrounded itself with a mass of yielding fibrous material; and, as a protection against its enemies, the monkeys and robber crabs, it has gradually assumed a remarkably hard shell. These changes have been wrought, it is almost needless to say, in accordance with the law variously known as "evolution," "natural selection," "the survival of the fittest." Those individuals that, by a sport of nature, were best fitted to their environment, or conditions of life, survived and transmitted to their descendants the chance peculiarity which had favored their preservation. The cocoanut, Mr. Allen tells us, "is descended from a great tribe—the palm and lilies—which have as their main distinguishing peculiarity the arrangement of parts in their flowers and fruits by threes each." Now everyone has observed on the top of a cocoanut three pores, one of which has a thin covering, while the other two are firmly sealed. Just below the thinly covered pore the embryo of the plant—a small round knob—can be detected imbedded in the meat of the nut, and through this soft opening the young plant forces itself in search of air and light. Early in the history of the cocoanut, before its shell had acquired its present defensive hardness, the other two pores were, doubtless, provided with embryos which have since disappeared. "The reason for this is that plants whose fruits have no special protection for their seeds are obliged to produce a great many of them at once, in order that one seed in a thousand may finally survive the onslaught of their enemies, but when they learn to protect themselves by hard coverings they can dispense with some of these supernumerary seeds and put more nutriment into each one of those they still retain." Unfortunately the hard covering of the cocoanut not only protects it against its enemies, but it is a barrier to the outward supply of water, and without water germination can not take place. Hence the need of an inward supply; the cocoanut, like the camel, must carry its own water. Those nuts that early in the process of evolution chanced to retain some of the mother liquid to the period of germination were enabled to supply their embryos with the water they required; the latter accordingly survived and transmitted to their descendants the chance peculiarity of the nuts from which they sprang.

Although Mr. Allen throughout his paper treats the cocoanut as a genuine nut, he does not fail to remark that this is not quite technically true, but that it is really "a drupaceous fruit." In his fascinating work, "The Evolutionist at Large," he dwells at length on the theory that "nuts and fruits are produced by the very slightest variation on the common type." Fruits, he declares, are really nuts which clothe themselves in an outer tunic of sweet and beautifully colored pulp as an inducement to the friendly bird to swallow their seed; but the seed itself they protect by a hard stone or shell, and often by poisonous or bitter juices within. Some one individual, by a "sport," being peculiarly sweet and bright-colored, attracted the fruit eaters, which aided in its dispersion and fertilization, and thus gave it special advantages in the transmission and developments of its kind. On the other hand nuts are, to the evolutionist, essentially fruits which have developed a hard or bitter shell in order to avoid being eaten. A few among them happen to be protected from destruction by their originally accidental possession of a bitter husk, a hard shell, or a few awkward spines and bristles. These the monkeys and squirrels reject, and they alone survive as the parents of future generations.

In this brief presentation a serious weakness in the evolution theory seems to us apparent. It has given the world many valuable suggestions; it has systemized and strengthened pre-existing ideas concerning heredity and variation. But it has yet offered no satisfactory explanation why fruits and nuts, for instance, originating by the hypothesis in a common stock, and coexisting in the same environment should develop in one case an increasing capacity to attract animals in search of food and in the other case, an increasing capacity to repel them. Is it not obvious that fruits and nuts are different and remain true to their types under all conditions, because they were designed for different purposes? Nature can not be correctly interpreted from its material side alone; it becomes intelligible only when it is looked upon as an expression of thought. Prof. Allen explains in his "Evolutionist at Large" that most collectors of natural history specimens try to get the most typical individuals, and reject those which are doubtful or intermediate; whereas the true plan is to collect all the aberrant individuals, which most diverge from the specific type, and thus to make the series as continuous as possible.

But if we would get a just conception of genera and species we must look for it in centers rather than in borders. The Greek sophist Eubulides boasted that he could prove the impossibility of becoming baldheaded. "Is a man bald," he asked, "if his head is covered with hair?" Receiving a negative reply, he continued, "Would the loss of one hair make him bald? of another? and another? and another? Clearly, then, it matters not how many hairs he loses he can never become bald." The common sense of mankind at once rejected this reasoning; but it is by reasoning like unto it that the evolutionists conclude when they declare that species are not to be distinguished from varieties because in a few instances—conspicuously in the case of mollusca—the varieties fill up the gaps between species by almost insensible gradations. We may acknowledge that the "man-apes" approach in cerebral development the lowest type of man; we may admit the difficulty of deciding whether sponges are vegetable or animal. But we shall always clearly distinguish between brute and man, vegetable and animal life, fruits and nuts, for our minds are framed to recognize not merely material forms but the designs which they embody—the eternal ideas which underly them and which remain distinct to us notwithstanding all material aberrations from them.

The idea is just now beginning to work its way down into certain drowsy minds that nominations for office in this county are made by a ring. These good people have been voting ring tickets for at least fifteen years; and most of them have denounced THE OREGONIAN violently during nearly all that time for telling them so. The present republican ticket in this county is just as good a one and was nominated by just as proper methods as any ticket which has been presented in this county since the "setting up" process began, as far back as 1866. THE OREGONIAN has often tried to beat these tickets, but the brethren upon whose minds a light is now beginning to dawn stood right in and saved the ring every time. We shall exercise a little caution now: the more so as the "kick" proceeds mainly from those who have been disappointed because they were not this time on the ring slate for the paying offices.

By the provisions of the Thurman bill the Union and Central Pacific railroads are required to pay 25 per cent. of their net earnings into a sinking fund to retire the interest and principal of the government bonds issued to assist in their construction. The house committee on Pacific railroads has now reported a bill to increase this bill from 25 to 55 per cent., and to require it on the net earnings of all the lines worked by the company, and not of those subsidized only. This would increase the annual payments of the Union Pacific from $1,800,558 to $3,065,400, and the payments of the Central Pacific from $782,920 to $3,032,350.

Senator Sabin, chairman of the republican national committee, in a recent interview, said: "There are unquestionably many incongruities in the present tariff; nobody understands that more clearly than intelligent republicans, of whom the great northwest has its full share;" but of all the "intelligent republicans in the northwest," Mr. Anderson of Kansas and the three republican members from Minnesota were the only ones who voted to even take up and consider the question.

They say "Jeffrey will easily beat Jordan." Perhaps he may not; though Jeffrey is a man whose wealth places him up among "the better class," while Tom Jordan is "only a poor mechanic." It might be a mistake to expect Jordan's defeat on this basis, though coupled with the fact that every ex-sheriff of the county is against him. The ex-sheriffs, who have had this good thing, appreciate it so well that they don't want to pass it round.

The New York Herald pronounces Secretary Robert Lincoln "the best dark horse for the presidential nomination on the republican ticket that this country is exhibiting." When a man is the unanimous choice of his party for second place, and the second choice of each of the factions for first place, he can hardly be considered a dark horse.

Two causes: one, physical debility and non-ownership of property, enable 100,000 of the 182,531 registered voters of New York city to escape the jury box. Exemptions for other causes leave only 15,000 citizens of the metropolis liable to jury service.

If you don't want to be taken by surprise when the republican convention makes its nomination, just keep an eye out for the man who will come in on a sentimental whoop after the candidates now talked of have tied each other up.

The high license law of Illinois will put $1,500,000 a year in the treasury of Cook county, the county in which Chicago is situated. Already it has closed an over 600 small "doggeries" in the city.

We wrote yesterday for the head of an article, "Our Infallible Beliefs." It went into the paper, "Our Infallible Bishops." It isn't much satisfaction to say that there have been worse mistakes.

The Philadelphia Times says: "When people begin seriously to ascertain whether it will be possible for Blaine to get the whole republican vote in November, then the noise will subside."

Why so many die of consumption? [illegible] neglect to use the proper remedy in season. When first attacked with a cough, oppression of the chest or breast, ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will cause the phlegm to raise, heal the irritated parts, and restore the system to health.

Enclose 10 cents and the address of an eastern friend to this office, for the statistical OREGONIAN. The best medium to circulate in the east.

THE OLYMPIAN CARRIES THE BROOM.—A race occurred last week in the straits of Fuca between the Yosemite and the new steamer Olympian which settles forever the question what steamer in Pacific waters has the greatest speed. Some days before the Yosemite, which for years had been recognized as the fastest steamer in California waters, had a brush with the Olympian in which she claimed to have come out ahead and her owner, Johnny Irving offered to lay from $1000 to $5000 that she could beat the Olympian ... She carries fifty pounds of steam and the Olympian is allowed forty-five pounds. It is rumored in Victoria that the steamers would have another race and half the population turned out on Beacon hill, many with glasses ... The Yosemite was en route to New Westminster but got out of her course especially ... for the Olympian ... Both had plenty ... freight aboard and both were in splendid trim. In a run of ... miles the Olympian beat the old champion about ... and a half miles and Irving acknowledged that his boat was no match for the newcomer. During the race the Olympian made twenty-two revolutions per minute. On the strength of the race Victorians offered to lay three to one on the Yosemite.

UNSKILLFUL SAILORS.—Captain Robertson of the Stark street ferry spoiled a first class item yesterday by his proverbial carefulness. Four young men, the most foolish sort of ... hardly ... started out in a sailboat from ... a gale of wind from the south. They could not make a straight tack for the East Portland shore on account of a boom of logs which was being towed to one of the up-town mills. They could not sail before the wind because the ferry was in the road, so they attempted to beat against the wind. The ferry started from this side at ... they were blown against the ... The cable caught their bowsprit and there was great danger of being carried under, when Robertson stopped the ferry just in time to save them. With help of those on board the ferry the ... and a skiff which put out from the boat house towed them back to safe moorings.

THREATENING TO KILL.—Paddy Martin when in the whisky business used to be up in the police court ... every other day complaining against some one of his customers for beating him. When he went out of business it was hoped that this nuisance was abated. But it seems Paddy had a partner and his name was Martin Curry and he has a doggery somewhere and continues the old business of making people drunk if they have money to pay for his gin. And now comes this Martin Curry and complains that John Lawrence Shaw has threatened to kill him. Curry may be too young to be a martyr but if he will insist on making people drunk and murderous he will oblige the public by facing the music like a man and letting himself get killed off when he puts his customers in the notion for murdering some one.

ONE MEANS OF SECURING SPENDING MONEY.—For the mild climate and the ease with which a dollar can be obtained on this coast are we indebted for the hoodlum. A case in point can be seen any day in this city where boys can with a hook piece of string and some salmon roe begged or stolen catch in a few hours enough suckers to bring them a dollar or two, which will keep them in pocket money for a day or two and render those who have parents independent of them for the time being and allow a freedom from all restraint not beneficial to youth. It would be unjust to say that all the boys who catch and peddle suckers are hoodlums, for there are many honest boys among them, but the majority of the hoodlums can be found engaged in this business at present.

CAUGHT ON A PIER.—As the Steamer Wonder was passing the city yesterday with a long raft of logs in tow, the wind forced the tail end of the raft against one of the Morrison street bridge piers where it caught. The boat was away up in the track of the Jefferson street ferry, which was delayed an hour while the Wonder pulled and hauled and puffed and snorted and backed and filled and at last succeeded in breaking loose and passed on with the logs away up Ross island slough.

Parquet & Smith are making good progress on their contract for piling along the front of the city levee. The work when completed will add greatly to the appearance and usefulness of this piece of the city's property.

Complaint is made of the unreliability of an alleged "Guide" which is posted in various places around town. Owing to its incorrectness in stating that the boat for Kalama sailed at 4 P. M. several persons have been detained here over night.

AMUSEMENTS.

NEW MARKET THEATER.—Miss Louise Pomeroy and the Baldwin theater company will arrive this morning from the Sound and open at the New Market to-night in "Claire and the Forge Master." One scene, a number of practical forges with men at work, is said to be wonderfully realistic and is a feature of the play. Special scenery for this purpose has been brought from the Baldwin. The sale of reserved seats is large.

THE TIVOLI.—"The Mascotte" continues to draw good houses at the Tivoli, and the question whether Portland would support an opera company at low prices of admission seems to be answered in the affirmative.

NEW OPERA AT THE ELITE.—Commencing to-night the Elite is to be run as a family theater with a first class vaudeville entertainment. The upper part of the theater has been transformed into a family circle for ladies and their escorts.

Practicing a Fraud.

For some time Mr. J. B. Garrison, who has a large sewing machine store at No. 167 Third street, has been annoyed and injured by the fraudulent representations of certain peripatetic sewing machine agents who have been taking advantage of the great reputation of Mr. Garrison's store by claiming to represent him in selling their machines. Agents of this character have been operating in various parts of the country, and it comes back to the store so frequently that Mr. Garrison wants the public to distinctly understand that he sends out no canvassers. Should it ever become necessary for him to put out agents he will supply them with an autograph letter certifying to their authority to act for him. If any of these agents make a pretense of selling for Mr. Garrison or doing repairs to machines of any kind the people will do well to ask to see the agent's credentials. Mr. Garrison is endeavoring to do business as any other merchant by selling good machines, keeping all kinds with parts and attachments, needles, etc., and doing substantial repairing. He pushes his business in the legitimate way by advertising and appealing to the intelligence of the people, and when they go to his store they find all the different machines from which to make their own selection, and then he will deliver the machine at any depot free of charge and will keep it in repair five years. Some cases of peculiar hardship have been developed in which unscrupulous agents have persuaded women to exchange sewing machines or buy a new one with the understanding that they could go to Mr. Garrison's store and exchange it for any other kind if they did not like the one taken. Instances have been reported also, where repairs have been attempted and after the agent has departed the machine is found to have been rendered worthless. Any person of intelligence will see at a glance that a machine that is repaired in a well established shop where all the tools, machinery and appliances are at hand and the most experienced mechanics are employed, is the place to have the work done.

Business Men

You like to send your wives and babies to the country for a bit of fresh air and out of the dust of July and August. I know you do. But you don't like to live two or three months without getting a peep at them. Not many of you do. And you are not overfond of jolting fifteen or twenty miles over a country road or taking a journey of two hundred miles between the business hours of Saturday and Monday.

What you would like best of all is a place where there is the most cheering scenery, the purest springs, the freshest mountain air, plenty of milk, cream and berries, with a chance for boat rides and rural drives, and a chance to climb among the rocks for ferns and mosses and near enough to Portland so that you might leave the rod and gun behind and take dinner with the well ones every Sunday. I know you would. Then here is just the place. Come and see Lake La Camas and don't forget to bring your fishing tackle.

MURDER IN THE FIRST DEGREE.

ANDREW LEONARD CONVICTED OF KILLING HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW, A. PATTON.

A Leaf from a Patent Medicine Advertisement—Strong Circumstantial Evidence—History of the Case.

[CORRESPONDENCE OF THE OREGONIAN.]

KALAMA, W. T., May 3.

The district court has been in session here during the week. There has been but one jury case tried, that of the territory against Andrew Leonard for the murder of Ambrose Patton. The facts of the case are briefly these:

On the 12th day of November, 1883, the body of Ambrose Patton was found at two miles above ... on the Cowlitz river. The pockets of deceased's clothing were turned inside out and his watch gone. An examination of the body showed that there were eleven ... wounds and one larger gunshot wound near the right shoulder blade.

An examination of the ground near where the body was found showed the place where the body had fallen when shot and that it had been dragged through the grass to the bank of the river a few feet distant and there thrown over the bank. A track was also found in the sand near the body about the size of a six or seven ... shown to have been worn by Leonard.

Several pieces of wadding were picked up ... lying showing that the shot had been fired from an ... near by. These pieces of wadding were preserved and on ... proved to be part of a leaf from Warner's safe kidney cure pamphlet. The last that had been seen of the deceased was on the ... day of November about ... o'clock in the afternoon not more than 100 yards from where his body was found.

The defendant's conduct on that day and before was such as to create a suspicion against him. On the morning of the ... day of November he had borrowed Mr. Braze's double barrel shotgun and in the presence of Braze and a man by the name of Redpath loaded it with buckshot and then put wadding in each barrel. The wadding that he put in both barrels was ... by both Braze and Redpath to be part of the Warner kidney cure pamphlet. The last seen of the defendant on that day before the shooting was about noon, when he was observed along the ... of the road apparently attempting to escape observation. He was again seen about a half or three quarters of an hour after the time Patton was supposed to have been shot. Leonard was then hurrying along toward Braze's house on a trail leading from where the body was found, apparently in a great hurry and looking back over his shoulder as though fearful of being followed.

He returned to Braze's house with the gun about 5 o'clock in the evening and put the gun away. The gun was afterward examined and one barrel was found to be still loaded. The charge in this barrel was drawn and the wadding compared with the wad dug from near Patton's body. It was found that the pieces of wadding fitted each other making the lines of printing complete.

Leonard's conduct during the evening at Braze's house was suspicious, showing that he was laboring under great excitement. The next morning he left the country, coming to Portland, where he remained a short time under the name of J. Jackson, from here going to southern Oregon and from there to Empire City, where he was arrested last fall and brought here by Sheriff Smith. These facts were shown by the prosecution, also that Leonard had frequently threatened Patton's life, and on one occasion attempted to kill him.

The defense attempted to show that Patton was seen about two hours after the time shown by prosecution Patton was shot. The evidence closed Friday forenoon, and the case went to the jury about ... o'clock in the afternoon. The jury were out but a little over two hours when they returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree.

A motion for a new trial was made and will be heard by Judge Hoyt on Monday. The defense was ably conducted by Judge Caton of Walla Walla, Judge Dennison of Vancouver and W. S. Beebe of Portland. The prosecution was represented by Prosecuting Attorney J. C. McFadden of Olympia and Alfred S. Frank of Portland.

The case has excited great interest throughout the county and the town has been filled with witnesses during the entire week.

THE EAST SIDE.

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARIES.

Democratic primaries will be held at ... o'clock this evening at the following places:

North East Portland—At Johnson's store, west side of Fourth street, immediately south of the bridge.

East Portland—At Seppach's hall.

Grant—At engine house of Third ward hook and ladder company, corner Tenth and Adams streets.

GRANT REPUBLICANS.

The republican club of Grant precinct met at Shute's hall Saturday evening, there being a good attendance. President George G. Smith occupied the chair with the new banner bearing the word "Victory" as a background. Good feeling prevailed throughout the meeting though not entirely harmonious. Republicans ... there were present ... a sprinkling of democrats ... business of importance was transacted and the meeting took a free and easy turn. J. J. Mays, candidate for the legislature, made a brief speech having for its burden the usury law, the ... lien law and convict labor. Mr. Coley had become so mixed he did not know which one of the ... was and the chair appointed a committee to examine him and find out. E. J. Sprague indorsed the entire ticket. F. W. Kern contributed his usual ... and John Shaver believed that if voters attend the primaries as largely as the polls on election day more satisfactory results would ensue. Mr. Whitford and others also contributed to the varied nature of the discussion. The meeting adjourned to meet at the same place next Saturday night.

REPUBLICAN MEETING TO-NIGHT.

The regular meeting of the union republican club of East Portland will be held at Hall & Stott's hall this evening and an interesting time is anticipated. The club is composed of nearly an equal number of ... and kickers, and the strife for the upper hand may precipitate a disruption. The majority of the committee appointed to prepare speakers complains of his inability to engage regular speakers through the opposition of the majority but it is rumored that an effort will be made to thwart the success of the opposition. It is also said that several of the independents were admitted to the club contrary to the rules, and that action will be taken to have the names of such stricken from the roll. We shall see to-night.

FOURTH OF JULY IN EAST PORTLAND.

The principal business men of East Portland having been waited on by a committee to ascertain their feelings regarding the getting up of a celebration in East Portland on the coming Fourth were unanimous in its favor, and as an earnest of their disposition subscribed sufficient to defray the probable expenses of the celebration so that it may be set down as an assured fact. The affair will probably be under the management of Pioneer Engine Co. No. 1.

POLICE CHANGE.

Marshal Linville has transferred Officer Jerolaman from night to day duty, with hours from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M. This appears to be a judicious change, as heretofore while three police did duty at night the marshal had to go it alone during the day, at ten-fold ... police besides his multifarious other duties. "Jerd" will render needed assistance during the day besides being on hand the earlier and most important part of the evening.

THE TERMAGANTS.

On the east side of Third street, near ..., is a house occupied by two families that have recently exemplified the proverb that "a house divided against itself cannot stand." Quarrels have been almost incessant of late and culminated Saturday by one of the women threatening to poison or otherwise dispatch her adversary, and a neighboring lady who interposed to quell the disturbance was summarily ejected from the porch. The threatened party invoked the protection of Officer Jerolaman, who put a quietus on the proceedings for the time being, and in the hope of the reconciling ... advised the injured party to wait till Monday before filing complaint, to which she assented.

NEW REGALIA.

Lily Lodge, I. O. G. T., are just in receipt of a handsome set of officers' regalia consisting of fourteen pieces, and costing $55. They are of scarlet velvet except that of the lodge deputy, which is of purple, and trimmed with gold fringe and bullion facings. The lodge is justly proud of its new acquisition, the result of their recent entertainment.

Y. M. C. A.

Reception to Mr. and Mrs. H. C. McCoy of the Rooms—Monthly Business Meeting.

The monthly business meeting of the Y. M. C. A. was held Saturday evening, May 3, in their rooms. The platform was filled with clergymen and business men of the city. The opening exercises of the evening consisted of singing conducted by Wm. Wallace, reading of the scripture by Rev. E. O. Sharp and prayer by ... The business of the meeting consisted of the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting by the recording secretary, Geo. H. Himes, the election of ten new members, seven active and three sustaining. The report of the general secretary was read, in which he reviewed the work of the past month. Some very interesting remarks were then made by J. F. Hazel ... on the growth of the association work.

The president, Mr. H. M. Clinton, then introduced to the audience Mr. H. J. McCoy, general secretary of the San Francisco association. Mr. McCoy said he had just been to Seattle organizing and helping the association there, and concluded he would return to his home by way of Portland so that his wife who accompanied him might have the privilege of seeing our fair city and be once more reminded of New England ... He spoke of the work in his own state and city and of the raising of $84,000 debt of the San Francisco association a few years ago by Mr. D. L. Moody ... He also referred to his associations with Mr. Moody in Baltimore seven years ago, where that godly man had just ... one of the most successful revivals ever known in this country, which was followed by a Y. M. C. A. convention at the conclusion of which the hundreds of Christian men present in ... of the grand ... that city ... clasped hands ... Christian ... Mr. Moody remarking to Mr. McCoy as they stood with hands united: "This is the grandest day of my life." The speaker then alluded to his visit to Washington, D. C., where President Hayes gave them a reception, and the ... that ... words ... I believe your work is the young men of the church reaching out ... try to save the young men of the world. Mr. McCoy said he believed this was the best definition of the work he ever ... Many took him ... were filled ... in a most touching manner. ... spoke ... in terms of the work here and in ... to which work Mr. C. H. Davis, assistant secretary of this association, had through Mr. McCoy just received and accepted an invitation to become their general secretary.

Mr. and Mrs. McCoy then took their stand in the parlor and all present had the privilege of taking them by the hand, the strangers being introduced by Secretary Frost. The ladies' auxiliary then served all present with ice cream and cake and a social time was enjoyed until 10 o'clock, when the guests took their leave for the steamer which was to bear them to their home.

We Believe

that in this age of competition advertising is absolutely necessary, and we follow the teachings of our belief, and make a liberal use of printers' ink in promulgating the attractiveness of our stock of clothing for men's, youths' and boys' wear, for we actually have goods and bargains worth talking about. At the same time there is such a thing as going to extremes in Advertising.

Blowing one's horn to the extent of several pages of a daily paper, when you have nothing new to say, is an extravagant farce. The public is apt to suspect the house that monopolizes the columns of a daily paper. But we do not propose to write an essay on the art of writing an "ad." We merely wish to call attention to some new goods, and as we have reached the end of our space, we will say, Simply come and see our new spring stock of clothing, furnishing goods, hats, etc.

TO A PRIMROSE FACE.

RONDEAU.

Across the waste of miles between
My own true love and my true heart,
Though envious winds blow cold and keen,
They ne'er may keep us two apart;
No missive, fleet with Cupid's dart,
Bears my allegiance to my queen—
For ghosts of dead years back and start
Across the waste.

Though ghosts of dead years back and start—
Oh, primrose face, oh, haughty queen—
I bless thee wheresoe'er thou art,
Saint ever worshipped, seldom seen!
Whate'er must be or may have been,
No pang need I, life has no smart,
So thy fair face still smile serene
Across the waste.

L'ENVOI.

Oh, primrose friend, I'll bet a bean
The [illegible] ;
As I [illegible]
I see my pipe [illegible] I must part.
Good night, sweet prime—but stay, sweetheart—
I've spilled enough tobac, I ween,
To tempt another smoke to start
Out of the waste!
—J. P. Bocock, in Puck.

[illegible]

Over the west the glory [illegible],
Faint [illegible] flocks [illegible] in the darkening sky;
And the low sounds that mark the close of day
Rise [illegible] and die;
Soft silence falls [illegible] meadow, hill and grove,
And in the hush I want you, oh, my love.

In the gay radiance of the morning hour,
In the warm brooding glory of the noon,
When [illegible] to the [illegible] of power,
With [illegible] fullness [illegible] tune,
The rush of life [illegible] the pulse to move,
That now, in yearning passion wants you, love.

Wants you to watch the crimson glow and fade,
The [illegible] the great branches of the broadening lime;
Wants you to feel the soft, gray, quiet shade,
Lap the tired world in blessed eventime;
Wants you to whisper: "Come, your power to prove,
The gloaming needs its angel; come, my love."
—All the Year Round.

SHE LOVES AND LIES.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

Late in the autumn, not many years since, a public meeting was held at the Mansion house, London, under the direction of the lord mayor.

Among the late arrivals who had no choice but to stand or leave the hall, were two ladies. One of them at once decided on leaving the hall. "I shall go back to the carriage," she said, "and wait for you at the door." Her friend answered, "I shan't keep you long. He is advertised to support the second resolution; I want to see him—and that is all."

An elderly gentleman, seated at the end of a bench, rose and offered his place to the lady who remained. She hesitated to take advantage of his kindness until he reminded her that he had heard what she had said to her friend. Before the third resolution was proposed his seat would be at his own disposal again. She thanked him, and without further ceremony took his place. He was provided with an opera glass, which he more than once offered to her, when famous orators appeared on the platform; she made no use of it until a speaker, known in the city as a ship owner, stepped forward to support the second resolution.

The moment he arose the lady asked for the opera glass. She kept it to her eyes for such a length of time, and with such evident interest in Mr. Lismore, that the curiosity of her neighbors was aroused. Had he anything to say in which a lady (evidently a stranger to him) was personally interested? There was nothing in the address he delivered which appealed to the enthusiasm of women. He was undoubtedly a handsome man, whose appearance proclaimed him to be in the prime of life—midway, perhaps, between thirty and forty years of age. But why a lady should persist in keeping an opera glass fixed on him all through his speech, was a question which found the general ingenuity at a loss for a reply.

Having returned the glass with an apology, the lady ventured on putting a question next. "Did it strike you, sir, that Mr. Lismore seemed to be out of spirits?" she asked.

"[illegible]"

The [illegible] of interest in the speaker did not [illegible]. [illegible] the old gentleman [illegible] explanation.

"[illegible] Mr. Lismore is troubled by anxieties connected with his business," she said. "[illegible] reported in the city yesterday that he was seriously embarrassed [illegible]."

A [illegible] at the end of the sentence [illegible]. A famous member of parliament [illegible] resolution. [illegible] the seat and the lady left the hall to join her friend.

* * * * * *

"Well, Mrs. Callender, has Mr. Lismore disappointed you?"

"Far from it! But I have heard a report about him which has alarmed me; he is said to be seriously troubled about money matters. How can I find out his address in the city?"

"We can stop at the first stationer's shop we pass and ask to look at the directory. Are you going to pay Mr. Lismore a visit?"

"I am going to think about it."

The next day a clerk entered Mr. Lismore's private room at the office and presented a visiting card. Mrs. Callender had reflected and had arrived at a decision. Underneath her name she had written these explanatory words, "On important business."

"Does she look as if she wanted money?" Mr. Lismore inquired.

"Oh, dear, no! She comes in her carriage."

"Is she young or old?"

"Old, sir."

To Mr. Lismore—conscious of the disastrous influences occasionally exercised over busy men by youth and beauty—this was a recommendation in itself. He said, "Show her in."

Observing the lady, as she approached him with the momentary curiosity of a stranger, he noticed that she still preserved the remains of beauty. She had also escaped the misfortune, common to persons at her time of life, of becoming too fat. Even to a man's eye her dressmaker appeared to have made the most of that favorable circumstance. Her figure had its defects concealed and its remaining merits set off to advantage. At the same time she evidently held herself above the common deceptions by which some women seek to conceal their age. She wore her own gray hair, and her complexion bore the test of daylight. On entering the room she made her apologies with some embarrassment. Being the embarrassment of a stranger (and not of a youthful stranger), it failed to impress Mr. Lismore favorably.

"I am afraid I have chosen an inconvenient time for my visit," she began.

"I am at your service," he answered a little stiffly; "especially if you will be so kind as to mention your business with me in a few words."

She was a woman of some spirit, and that reply roused her. "I will mention it in one word," she said smartly. "My business is gratitude."

He was completely at a loss to understand what she meant, and he said so plainly. Instead of explaining herself, she put a question:

"Do you remember the night of the 11th of March, between five and six years ago?"

He considered for a moment. "No," he said, "I don't remember it. Excuse me, Mrs. Callender, I have affairs of my own to attend to which cause me some anxiety—"

"Let me assist your memory, Mr. Lismore, and I will leave you to your affairs. On the date that I have referred to, you were on your way to the railway station at Bexmore, to catch the night express from the north to London."

As a hint that his time was valuable the ship owner had hitherto remained standing. He now took his customary seat and began to listen with some interest. Mrs. Callender had produced her effect on him already.

"It was absolutely necessary," she proceeded, "that you should be on board your ship in the London docks at 9 o'clock the next morning. If you had lost the express, the vessel would have sailed without you."

The expression of his face began to change to surprise. "Who told you that?" he asked.

"You shall hear directly. On your way into the town your carriage was stopped by an obstruction on the high road. The people of Bexmore were looking at a house on fire."

He started to his feet. "Good heavens! Are you the lady?"

She held up her hand in satirical protest. "Gently, sir. You suspected me just now of wasting your valuable time. Don't rashly conclude that I am the lady until you find out that I am acquainted with the circumstances."

"Is there no excuse for my failing to recognize you?" Mr. Lismore asked. "We were on the dark side of the burning house; you were fainting, and I—"

"And you," she interrupted, "after saving me at the risk of your own life, turned a deaf ear to my poor husband's entreaties when he asked you to wait till I had recovered my senses."

"Your poor husband? Surely, Mrs. Callender, he received no serious injury from the fire?"

"The firemen rescued him under circumstances of peril," she answered, "and at his great age he sank under the shock. I have lost the kindest and the best of men. Do you remember how you parted from him, burned and bruised in saving me? He liked to talk of it in his last illness. 'At least,' he said to you, 'tell me the name of the man who has preserved my wife from a dreadful death.' You threw your card to him out of the carriage window, and away you went at a gallop to catch your train. In all the years that have passed I have kept that card, and have vainly inquired for my brave sea captain. Yesterday I saw your name on the list of speakers at the Mansion house. Need I say that I attended the meeting. Need I tell you now why I come here and interrupt you in business hours?"

She held out her hand. Mr. Lismore took it in silence and pressed it warmly.

"You have not done with me yet," she resumed with a smile. "You remember what I said of my errand, when I first came in?"

"You said it was an errand of gratitude."

"Something more than the gratitude which only says, 'Thank you,'" she added. "Before I explain myself, however, I want to know what you have been doing, and how it was that my inquiries failed to trace you after that terrible night."

The appearance of depression which Mrs. Callender had noticed at the public meeting showed itself again in Mr. Lismore's face. He sighed as he answered her:

"My story has one merit," he said: "it is soon told. I cannot wonder that you failed to discover me. In the first place, I was not captain of my ship at that time. I was only mate. In the second place, I inherited some money, and ceased to lead a sailor's life in less than a year from the night of the fire. You will now understand what obstacles were in the way of your tracing me. With my little capital I started successfully in business as a ship owner. At the time I naturally congratulated myself on my own good fortune. We little know, Mrs. Callender, what the future has in store for us."

He stopped. His handsome features hardened; and he was suffering and concealing pain. Before it was possible to speak to him there was a knock at the door. Another visitor, without an appointment, had called; the clerk appeared again with a card and a message.

"The gentleman begs you will see him, sir. He has something to tell you which is too important to be delayed."

Hearing the message, Mrs. Callender rose immediately.

"It is enough for to-day that we understand each other," she said. "Have you any engagement to-morrow after the hours of business?"

"None."

She pointed to her card on the writing table. "Will you come to me to-morrow evening at that address? I am like the gentleman who has just called. I, too, have my reason for wishing to see you."

He gladly accepted the invitation. Mrs. Callender stopped him as he opened the door for her.

"Shall I offend you," she said, "if I ask a strange question before I go? I have a better motive, mind, than mere curiosity. Are you married?"

"No."

"Forgive me again," she resumed. "At my age you cannot positively misunderstand me, and yet—"

She hesitated. Mr. Lismore tried to [illegible] her confidence. "Pray don't stand on ceremony, Mrs. Callender. Nothing that you can ask me need be prefaced by an apology."

Thus encouraged she ventured to proceed. "You may be engaged to be married," she suggested, "or you may be in love?"

He found it impossible to [illegible]. But he answered without hesitation.

"There is no such bright prospect in my life," he said; "I am not even in love."

She left him with a little sigh. It sounded like a sigh of relief.

In an hour's time [illegible] Ernest's [illegible] messenger returned with the reply.

"The lady was just going out when I rang at the door," the [illegible], "and she took the letter from me herself. She seemed to know your handwriting, and she asked me who I came from. As soon as I told her I was ordered to wait."

Ernest opened the letter:

"Dear Mr. Lismore: One of us must speak out, and your letter of apology forces me to be that one. If you are really so proud and so [illegible] as you seem to be, I shall offend you. If not, I shall prove myself to be your friend.

"Your excuse is 'pressure of business.' The truth (as I have good reason to believe) is 'want of money.' I heard a stranger at that public meeting say that you were seriously embarrassed by one failure in the city.

"Let me tell you what my own pecuniary position is in two words. I am the childless widow of a rich man.

"After what I owe you I don't regard it as repaying an obligation. I consider myself as merely performing a duty when I offer to assist you by a loan of money.

"Wait a little before you throw my letter into the wastepaper basket.

"Circumstances which it is impossible for me to mention before we meet put it out of my power to help you unless I attach to my most sincere offer of service a very unusual and very embarrassing condition. If you are on the brink of ruin that misfortune will plead my excuse—and your excuse, too, if you accept the loan on my terms. In any case, I rely on the sympathy and forbearance of the man to whom I owe my life.

"After what I have now written there is only one thing to add. I [illegible] to decline accepting your excuses, and I shall expect to see you to-morrow evening, as we arranged. I am an obstinate old woman, but I am also your faithful friend and servant.

"MARY CALLENDER."

Ernest looked up from the letter. "What can this possibly mean?" he wondered.

But he was too sensible a man to be content with wondering. He decided on keeping his engagement.

Keeping his engagement with Mrs. Callender, Ernest discovered that riches might be lavishly and yet modestly used.

Mrs. Callender advanced to welcome her guest in a simple evening dress perfectly suited to her age. All that had looked faded and worn in her face by daylight was now softly obscured by shaded lamps. Objects of beauty surrounded her, which glowed with subdued radiance from their background of sober color. The influence of appearance is the strongest of all outward influences which it has. For the moment the scene produced its impression on Ernest in spite of the terrible anxieties which consumed him. Mrs. Callender in his office was a woman who had stepped out of her appropriate sphere. Mrs. Callender in her own house was a woman who had risen to a new place in his estimation.

"I am afraid you don't thank me for forcing you to keep your engagement," she said, with her friendly tones and her pleasant smile.

"Indeed I do thank you," he replied. "Your beautiful house and your gracious welcome have persuaded me into forgetting my troubles—for a while."

The smile passed away from her face. "Then it is true," she said gravely.

"Only too true."

She led him to a seat beside her, and waited to speak again until her maid had brought in the tea.

"Have you read my letter in the same friendly spirit in which I wrote it?" she asked when they were alone again.

"I have read your letter gratefully, but—"

"But you don't know yet what I have to say. Let us understand each other before we make any objections on either side. Will you tell me what your present position is—at its worst? I can, and will, speak plainly when my turn comes, if you will honor me with your confidence. Not if it distresses you," she added, observing him attentively.

He was ashamed of his hesitation—and he made amends for it. "Do you thoroughly understand me?" when the whole truth had been laid before her without reserve.

She summed up the result in her own words.

"If your overdue ship returns safely within a month of this time you can borrow the money you want without difficulty. If the ship is lost, you have no alternative when the end of the month comes, but to accept a loan from [illegible] or to suspend payment. Is that the hard truth?"

"It is."

"And the sum you require is—£20,000?"

"Yes."

"I have twenty times as much money as that, Mr. Lismore, at my disposal—on one condition."

"The condition alluded to in your letter?"

"Yes."

"Does the fulfillment of the condition depend in some way on any decision of mine?"

"It depends entirely on you."

The answer closed his lips.

With a composed manner and a steady hand she poured herself out a cup of tea.

"My husband was very fond of me; he had the most absolute confidence in my discretion, and in my sense of duty to him and to myself. His last words before he died were words that thanked me for making the happiness of his life. As soon as I had in some degree recovered, after the affliction that had fallen on me, his lawyer and executor produced a copy of his will and said there were two clauses in it which my husband had expressed a wish that I should read. It is needless to say that I obeyed.

"I now possess what is called a life interest in my husband's fortune," she said. "The money is to be divided at my death among charitable institutions; excepting a certain event—"

"Which is provided for in the will?" Ernest asked, helping her to go on.

"Yes. I am to be absolute mistress of the whole of the £400,000"—her voice dropped and her eyes looked away from him as she spoke the next words—"on this one condition, that I marry again."

He looked at her in amazement.

"Surely I have mistaken you," he said. "You mean on this one condition, that you do not marry again."

"No, Mr. Lismore; I mean exactly what I have said. You now know that the recovery of your credit and your peace of mind rests entirely with yourself."

After a moment of reflection he took her hand, and raised it respectfully to his lips. "You are a noble woman," he said.

She made no reply. With drooping head and downcast eyes she waited for his decision. He accepted his responsibility.

"I must not, and dare not, think of the hardship of my own position," he said; "I owe it to you to speak without reference to the future that may be in store for me. No man can be worthy of the sacrifice which your generous forgetfulness of self is willing to make. I respect you, I admire you; I thank you with my whole heart. Leave me to my fate, Mrs. Callender, and let me go."

He rose. She stopped him with a gesture.

"A young woman," she answered, "would shrink from saying—what I, as an old woman, mean to say now. I refuse to leave you to your fate. I ask you to prove that you respect me, admire me, and thank me with your whole heart. Take one day to think—and let me hear the result. You promise me this?"

He promised.

"Now go," she said.

The next morning Ernest received a letter from Mrs. Callender. She wrote to him as follows:

"There are some considerations which I ought to have mentioned yesterday evening before you left my house.

"I ought to have reminded you—if you consent to reconsider your decision—that the circumstances do not require you to pledge yourself to me absolutely.

"At my age I can with perfect propriety assure you that I regard our marriage as simply and solely a formality which we must fulfill, if I am to [illegible] of standing between you and ruin.

"[illegible] of the missing ship appears in time, the only reason for the marriage is at an end. We shall be as good friends as ever, without the encumbrance of a formal tie to bind us.

"In the other event, I should ask you to [illegible] which, considering my position, you will understand and excuse.

"[illegible] unnecessary [illegible] arrange your affairs that immediately afterward we leave England for any foreign place which [illegible]. Some of my friends, and, perhaps, some of your friends, will certainly [illegible].

"[illegible] I have the most [illegible] sufficiently to your [illegible].

"[illegible] of what you [illegible] to the [illegible].

"[illegible] cannot, in the course of nature, [illegible] by the society of [illegible] years. You are young [illegible] something more than a mere form. Even if you meet with the happy woman [illegible] honestly tell me of it—and I promise [illegible] her that she has only to wait.

"In the meantime, don't think, because I [illegible], that I write heartlessly. You pleased and interested me when I first saw you at the public meeting. I don't think I could have proposed what you call this sacrifice of myself to a man who personally repelled me—though I might have felt my debt of gratitude as sincerely as ever. Whether your ship is saved, or whether your ship is lost, old Mary Callender likes you—and owns it without false shame.

"Let me have your answer this evening, either personally or by letter—whichever you like best."

Mrs. Callender received a written answer long before evening. It said much in few words:

"A man impenetrable to kindness might be able to resist your letter. I am not that man. Your great heart has conquered me."

The weeks passed and no news was received of the missing ship. With the marriage license in Ernest's possession, they waited until the day before the ship owner's liabilities became due. Mrs. Callender's lawyer and Mrs. Callender's maid were the only persons trusted with their secret. Leaving the chief clerk in charge of the business, with every pecuniary demand on his employer satisfied in full, the strangely married pair quitted England.

They arranged to wait a few days in Paris to receive any letters of importance which might have been addressed to Ernest in the interval. On the evening of their arrival a telegram from London was waiting at their hotel. It announced that the missing ship had passed up the channel—undiscovered in fog—until she reached the Downs on the day before Ernest's liabilities fell due.

"Do you regret it?" Mrs. Lismore said to her husband.

"Not for a moment!" he answered.

They decided on pursuing their journey as far as Munich.

Mrs. Lismore's taste for music was matched by Ernest's taste for painting. In his leisure hours he cultivated the art, and delighted in it.

Ernest's days were passed in the galleries; Mrs. Lismore remaining at home devoted to her music, until it was time to go out with her husband for a drive. Living together in a state of [illegible] concord, they were nevertheless not living happily. Without any visible reason for the change, Mrs. Lismore's spirits were depressed. On the occasions when Ernest noticed it she made an effort to be cheerful, which it distressed him to see.

But when two people are living together in a state of artificial tranquillity, it seems to be a law of nature that the elements of disturbance are unseen, and that the outburst comes inevitably with the lapse of time.

In ten days from the date of their arrival at Munich the crisis came. Ernest returned later than usual from the picture gallery, and—for the first time in his wife's experience—shut himself up in his own room.

He appeared at the dinner hour with a futile excuse. Mrs. Lismore waited until the servant had withdrawn. "Now, Ernest," she said, "it's time to tell me the truth."

Her manner when she said those few words took him by surprise. She was unquestionably confused; and instead of looking at him, she trifled with the fruit on her plate. Embarrassed on his side, he could only answer, "I have nothing to tell."

"Were there many visitors to the gallery?" she asked.

"About the same as usual."

"Any that you particularly noticed," she went on. "I mean among the ladies."

He laughed uneasily. "You forget how interested I am in the pictures," he said.

There was a pause. She looked up at him—and suddenly looked away again. But he saw it plainly; there were tears in her eyes.

"Do you mind turning down the gas?" she said. "My eyes have been weak all day."

He complied with her request—the more readily, having his own reasons for being glad to escape the glaring scrutiny of the light.

"I think I will rest a little on the sofa," she resumed. In the position which he occupied his back would have now been turned on her. She stopped him when he tried to move his chair. "I would rather not look at you, Ernest," she said, "since you have lost confidence in me."

Not the words, but the tone touched all that was generous and noble in his nature. He left his place and knelt beside her, and opened to her his whole heart.

"Am I not unworthy of you?" he asked when it was over.

She pressed his hand in silence.

"I should be the most ungrateful wretch living," he said, "if I did not think of you, and you only, now that my confession is made. We will leave Munich to-morrow, and, if resolution can help me, I will only remember the sweetest woman my eyes ever looked on as the creature of a dream."

She hid her face on his breast, and reminded him of that letter of her writing, which had decided the course of their lives.

"When I thought you might meet the happy woman in my lifetime, I said to you [illegible] of it—and I promise to tell her that she has only to wait.' Time must pass, Ernest, before it can be needful to perform my promise. But you might let me see her. If you find her in the gallery to-morrow, you might bring her here."

Mrs. Lismore's request met with no refusal. Ernest was only at a loss to know how to grant it.

"You tell me she is a copyist of pictures," his wife reminded him. "She will be interested in hearing of the portfolio of drawings by the great French artists which I bought for you in Paris. Ask her to come and see them, and to tell you if she can make some copies. And say, if you like, that I shall be very happy to become acquainted with her."

He felt her heart beating fast on his bosom. In the fear that she might lose all control over herself, he tried to relieve her by speaking lightly. "What an invention yours is!" he said. "If my wife ever tries to deceive me, I shall be a mere child in her hands."

She rose abruptly from the sofa—kissed him on the forehead—and said wildly, "I shall be better in bed!" Before he could move or speak she had left him.

The next morning he knocked at the door of his wife's room, and asked how she had passed the night.

"I have slept badly," she answered, "and I must beg you to excuse my absence at breakfast time." She called him back as he was about to withdraw. "Remember," she said, "when you return from the gallery to-day I expect that you will not return alone."

* * * * * *

Three hours later he was at home again. The young lady's services as a copyist were at his disposal; she had returned with him to look at the drawings.

The sitting room was empty when they entered it. He rang for his wife's maid, and was informed that Mrs. Lismore had gone out. Refusing to believe the woman, he went to his wife's apartments. She was not to be found.

When he returned to the sitting room the young lady was not unnaturally offended. He could make allowances for her being a little out of temper at the slight which had been put on her; but he was unspeakably disconcerted by the manner in which she expressed herself.

"I have been talking to your wife's maid while you have been away," she said. "I find you have married an old woman for her money. She is jealous of me, of course?"

"Let me beg you to alter your opinion," he answered. "You are wronging my wife; she is incapable of any such feeling as you attribute to her."

The young lady laughed. "At any rate, you are a good husband!" she said, satirically. "Suppose you own the truth. Wouldn't you like her better if she was young and pretty like me?"

He was not merely surprised, he was disgusted. [illegible]

"I confess [illegible]," he said [illegible].

[illegible]

"[illegible] he said, [illegible] I must leave the room."

She ran to the [illegible] herself [illegible].

He [illegible] to let her pass.

She [illegible] threw her arms [illegible], kissing him passionately, and whispered, with her lips to his ear, "Oh, Ernest, forgive me! Could I have asked you to marry me for my money, if I had not taken refuge in disguise?"

When he had sufficiently recovered to think, he put her back from him. "Is there an end to the deception now?" he asked sternly. "Am I to trust you in your new character?"

"You are not to be harder on me than I deserve," she answered gently. "Did you ever hear of an actress named Miss Max?"

He began to understand her. "Forgive me if I spoke harshly," he said. "You put me to a severe trial."

She burst into tears. "Love," she murmured, "is my only excuse."

From that moment she had won her pardon. He took her hand and made her sit by him.

"Yes," he said, "I have heard of Miss Max and of her wonderful power of personation—and I have always regretted not having seen her while she was on the stage."

"Did you hear anything more of her, Ernest?"

"Yes, I heard that she was a pattern of modesty and good conduct, and that she gave up her profession at the height of her success to marry an old man."

"Will you come with me to my room?" she asked. "I have something there which I wish to show you."

It was the copy of her husband's will.

"Read the lines, Ernest, which begin at the top of the page. Let my dead husband speak for me."

The lines ran thus:

"My motive in marrying Miss Max must be stated in this place, in justice to her—and, I will venture to add, in justice to myself. I felt the sincerest sympathy for her position. She was without father, mother or friends; one of the poor, forsaken children whom the mercy of the Foundling hospital provides with a home. Her after life on the stage was the life of a virtuous woman persecuted by profligates, insulted by some of the baser creatures associated with her, to whom she was an object of envy. I offered her a home and the protection of a father on the only terms which the world would [illegible] as worthy of us. My experience of her since our marriage has been the experience of unvarying goodness, sweetness and sound sense. She has behaved so nobly in a trying position, that I wish her, even in this life, to have her reward. I entreat her to make a second choice in marriage, which shall not be a mere form. I firmly believe that she will choose well and wisely, that she will make the happiness of a man who is worthy of her, and that, as wife and mother, she will set an example of inestimable value in the social sphere that she occupies. In proof of the heartfelt sincerity with which I pay my tribute to her virtues, I add to this my will the clause that follows."

With the clause that followed Ernest was already acquainted.

"Will you now believe that I never loved till I saw your face for the first time?" said his wife. "I had no experience to place me on my guard against the fascination—the madness some people might call it—which possesses a woman when all her heart is given to a man. Don't despise me, my dear! Remember that I had to save you from disgrace and ruin. Besides, my old stage remembrances tempted me. I had acted in a play in which the heroine did—what I have done! It didn't end with me as it did with her in the story. She was represented as rejoicing in the success of her disguise. I have known some miserable hours of doubt and shame since our marriage. When I went to meet you in my own person at the picture gallery—oh, what relief, what joy I felt when I saw how you admired me! It was not because I could no longer carry on the disguise. I was able to get rest from the effort, not only at night, but in the daytime, when I was shut up in my retirement in the music-room, and when my maid kept watch against discovery. No, my love, I hurried on the disclosure, because I could no longer endure the hateful triumph of my own deception. Ah, look at that witness against me! I can't bear even to see it!"

She abruptly left him. The drawer that she had opened to take out the copy of the will also contained the false gray hair which she had discarded. It had only that moment attracted her notice. She snatched it up and turned to the fireplace.

Ernest took it from her before she could destroy it. "Give it to me," he said.

"Why?"

He drew her gently to his bosom and answered, "I must not forget my old wife."

A DEMOCRATIC WAIL.

Another Effort to Divert the Party from the Tariff Question.

New York World, April [illegible].

In six weeks more the republican candidate for the presidency will be nominated and his party will be at work for his election. The nominee may be Edmunds, may be Arthur, may be Blaine or may be somebody else. The party will be united in his support.

Congress has been in session for over four months and a half. The country looked to the democratic majority in the house of representatives to mark out an aggressive, vigorous policy upon which the democratic party could appeal to the people to eject the republican candidate and restore the republic.

The election of Mr. Carlisle was desired by the democracy because it was feared that Mr. Randall had too much sympathy with the protectionists. Mr. Carlisle encouraged the belief that he recognized the futility of a fruitless agitation of the tariff question at this time, and the wisdom of a [illegible] which prove the necessity of a change and reform at Washington. It was on this implied pledge that Mr. Carlisle was elected.

What has been done? Instead of uniting the party and rallying the people to its support, the democratic branch of congress has done its best to divide the party.

The real issue of this campaign is the most momentous that can be placed before a free people. [illegible] their power to elect their own rulers [illegible] their own government. Over the gateway of the inclosure which surrounds this solemn burial place is written "These are they who came out of great tribulation." Round the base of the statue runs the inscription: "Sacred to the memory of a great company of Christian people, chiefly women and children, who near this spot were cruelly massacred by the followers of the rebel Nana Dhundopunt of Bithoor, and cast, the dying with the dead, into the well below on the 15th of July, 1857."

Mr. Blaine as a Historian.

Chicago Herald.

When Mr. Blaine began to write his book it was given out as one of the principal charms of the work that nobody was to be stabbed in his grave, and that the living should be treated from the strictest nonpartisan standpoint. It was said that Mr. Blaine, sitting in his library, could judge of the events and actors of his last career with all the coolness of the retired statesman, and that it was his purpose to write of those events and the men engaged in them with an impartiality which should ever govern the historian of a generation's work. Mr. Blaine has certainly fulfilled his promise in one respect at least. He has said no ill of the dead, nor anything mean of the living. But he has distributed "taffy" with a generous "lick," and the men of his time are beaten till one dies of the monotony.

The cultivation of forests has long been systematically pursued in France, Spain and Switzerland. The governments of these countries have expended immense sums of money in the Alps, Pyrenees and Ardennes, where only the hardiest and cheapest trees can be grown. FRED ARCHER.

An Interview with the Greatest of Modern English Jockeys.

BEN D'OR AND ROBERT THE DEVIL.

The Great Knight of the Pigskin in His Own House—He Reduces His Weight by Means of Turkish Baths.

From the Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News.

It is in a very pleasant room at Falmouth house that I wait the return of Fred Archer. Mrs. Archer [illegible] to tell me that her husband is sure not to be long. He has been out with the drag, and "There he is!" [illegible] as the sound of wheels is heard [illegible] and the horn which [illegible].

[illegible] Archer enters the room [illegible] "How are you?" addressed to the famous [illegible] a few days of the [illegible] of the racing season is nothing more than a formality. He may have been putting on weight [illegible] and [illegible] in the endeavor to get it off again, for instance, but this is not the case.

"I could ride 8 stone 10 pounds to-morrow, and [illegible] pounds off without very much trouble. I could ride 8 stone 5 pounds in the course of the year I've no doubt," Archer says.

"I just looked in to have a chat," I explain, "as I want to tell my readers how you are. A good many people take a very keen interest in you [illegible] at this time of the year, you know."

"Well, there's certainly not much the matter," Archer answers with a smile. "I keep myself fit with work, you see, and then I generally manage to hunt four days a week. I was trying some of the two-year-olds before I went out with the drag to-day. I had a spin on Kate Craig and on La Trappe, and a rattling good gallop on Falmouth."

"How's he? If he's as good as he was—and I take it he was decidedly better than Highland Chief as a two-year-old in spite of the race for the [illegible] Sweepstakes—he ought to be very smart," I remark.

"So he is, you may depend on it," Archer replies, "and very well, too."

"It was a strange thing your winning the Middle Park last year on that mare you just mentioned, La Trappe, wasn't it?" I ask. "I thought that race was almost the greatest certainty for Wild Thyme I ever saw, and I should have laid odds you were not in the first three."

"It was strange. I can't make out how I came to win now. I certainly did not think I had a chance, and she started at 20 to 1, or something like that. You may depend upon it that it was a false run race. We went no pace at first and then the mare just had speed to get home with one run. It happens that way sometimes; you pull it off when you think you haven't an outside chance."

How often, I reflect, you don't pull it off when you think that you have an invincible chance, which, however, is merely another way of stating Archer's proposition [illegible] of things does not [illegible] when he is in the saddle, I do not [illegible]. I glance round the walls, on which [illegible] records of past triumphs hang, and [illegible] wonder which [illegible] the secret [illegible].

"[illegible] know, only I suppose you [illegible] years [illegible]."

With [illegible] Archer replies, with a smile, "I [illegible] away a [illegible] always [illegible] how I can steal a length or two [illegible] anything of that [illegible]. But [illegible] and what [illegible] the papers about the [illegible]."

[illegible]

"[illegible] I suppose," I continue, "not many [illegible] at least know how to make the most of this secret?"

"That's it. One of the best riders I ever saw over five furlongs was Constable. Poor Constable; you recollect him of course? He was wonderfully smart, always well away, always galloping at once, you know."

"It has occurred to me with regard to your own riding, Archer, that you are much gentler with your horses than you used to be, though you certainly get as much or more out of them. Is it so, do you think?" I ask.

"You are quite right," he frankly replies. "It's a great mistake to knock a horse about, and I know that a few years back I was a severe rider. I've learnt better by experience. I rarely hit a horse more than twice in a finish, now, and I rarely or never have rowels to my spurs. You can hurt a horse almost as much without, for the matter of that, if you want to, but it's bad policy to hurt them," and he shows me the spur he has on at the moment.

"That's what Tom Cannon always says so earnestly," I observe, and Archer heartily and warmly rejoins:

"Ah! there's a rider, good all round in every way. Oddly enough, I was talking about him to Watts only this very morning. You know Watts was his apprentice, and Tom turned him out a fine jockey. Every one who knows Tom seems to like him."

"Tom Cannon turned out another pupil who holds his own," I suggest.

"Which do you mean? Ah! Mr. Arthur Coventry. Yes, there's no mistake about him. It's rather hard on us having to give Mr. Coventry seven pounds if we ride against him. He [illegible] professional jockeys only seven pounds extra, you [illegible]. [illegible] give him [illegible] pounds not to speak of seven. He's an amateur [illegible]."

[illegible] St. Simon [illegible].

"[illegible] I won very easy, very easy indeed. I [illegible] twelve pounds [illegible] together, at least St. Simon would win. There's no better judge of horses [illegible] than Tom Cannon, but I think St. Simon's a good deal better than he supposes. Mr. Dawson says that St. Simon is the best colt he ever saw."

"That's saying a good deal," I reply. "There have been some good ones at Heath house. What do you think the best you ever rode?"

"Well, St. Simon, I suppose," Archer says, "but Wheel-of-Fortune was a wonderfully fine mare. I don't think I was ever on a better. She must have been good, too. In the spring of 1879, we tried Wheel of Fortune at weight for age against the Leger winners of the two years before, Silvio and Jannette, and Wheel-of-Fortune won in a canter. That was good enough to go on."

"Good enough to make the One Thousand a certainty, unlike so many of those certainties that don't come off," I answer.

"Yes, and there's a two-year-old at Heath House, out of Wheel-of-Fortune, that ought to fetch a long price at the sale. A real good one, I should think, but she's only been cantering about—hasn't been tried, so we don't really know what she can do, though she looks like galloping."

"This sale is rather a painful subject for you, I'm afraid?"

"Yes! You may be sure that I am sorry to think I am parting from the Wheel of Fortune jacket. I have ridden for Lord Falmouth for twelve years, and there has never been a wrong word. I owe most of my success to having been Kairwan Dwellings.

The architectural disposition of nearly all the houses in Kairwan is the same, a square block, in the middle of which is a square court. The door is low, strengthened by nails, and furnished with large bolts, it only opens half way with a terrible grating. The rooms are arranged around the court, which, as well as the terraced roofs, slants in order to facilitate the running of the water into a cistern. They drink only rain water, the water of the wells contains much magnesia, but serves for all household purposes.

The living-room of the family serves at once for reception, dining and bed room. It is the only one decently furnished and clean. It is in the shape of a Latin cross, taking away the foot, and forms, in fact, three distinct compartments separated by curtains. To the right and left are the beds, in front, low divans furnished with cushions, the walls are hung with variegated carpets or ornamented with encaustic faience to the height of a man. The ceiling is made of young olive trunks placed transversely upon the walls, which explains the narrowness of the rooms and the absence of large square ones. In the dwellings of the rich the paved floor is covered with matting and carpeting, the ceiling is covered with a paneling of wood decorated with arabesques and little shelves are hung here and there.

Sometimes fantastic animals painted in red with a hieratical rigidity and barbarism relieve the bareness of the whitewashed walls. During the hot hours of the siesta, the door, carefully shut, preserves in the interior an agreeable freshness. A little window furnished with glass gives a discreet light, which leaves all the objects in a shadow like obscurity, propitious to nonchalant reverie. The other rooms serve as stable and kitchen. There are no cellars, but in the pavement of the floor of the court and rooms one notices large square flag stones, the situation of the silos—a kind of great hole, with careful mason work, where the provision of grain is kept for the whole year.

These houses, veritable gynecæa, shelter the women, whose husbands are arbitrary and jealous masters, and seclude them from all contact with the outer world. To enter here is an especial favor reserved for the physician and the marabout. Fortunately for me, I had brought a traveling case of medicine, and the very first days I had to attend several neighbors. I had regular patients, and my reputation extended itself little by little. This character of physician, the best passport in Arabian countries, allowed me to see and observe closely many things which, without it, fanaticism would have hidden inexorably from Christian eyes.—A. F. Jacassy, in Harper's Magazine for May.

A Magistrate's Idea.

Some time ago Colonel Blackburn, brother of the senator elect from Kentucky, and also brother of an ex governor of the blue grass commonwealth, went to Jefferson county, Arkansaw, and was in due time elected justice of the peace. Having come from a good family, his court became quite prominent, and his services, particularly in the way of performing marriage ceremonies, were extensively sought. On one occasion a negro named Dave Hall and a colored girl of broad pronunciation came before him and were married. Several months afterwards Dave and his wife again appeared before the distinguished magistrate.

"Well," said the judge, "what can I do for you?"

"Yer ken do a good deal, sah," the husband replied. "Dis heah 'oman what yer married me to ain't de sorter 'oman what I wanted. She done fill de bill what I made out, an I wants a divorcement right heah."

"Upon what grounds?" asked the judge.

"On de grouns, sah, dat I doan want de 'oman."

"Have you anything to say?" inquired the justice, turning to the woman.

"Got his ter say, sah. Doan want de man. Thought I wuz gwine ter git er gineman, but I didn't."

A lawyer happened to be present, and who doubtless thought that the judge needed legal information, arose and said:

"Your honor, you can take no action in this matter, as it is entirely beyond your jurisdiction."

"I ask for none of your instruction," the magistrate replied. "I understand the law when it says that a justice of the peace who marries a couple has a right, at any time, to grant them a divorce. Mr. Clerk, just make an entry on the docket that these parties are no longer man and wife. Go, you are free."

The Hot Water Remedy.

Relative to hot water as a remedial agent, Hall's Journal of Health publishes some interesting hints. It says:

A strip of flannel or a napkin folded lengthwise and dipped in hot water and wrung out, and then applied around the neck of a child that has the croup will usually bring relief in ten minutes.

A towel folded several times and dipped in hot water and quickly wrung and applied over the seat of the pain in toothache or neuralgia, will generally afford prompt relief. This treatment in colic works almost like magic. I have seen cases that have resisted other treatment for hours yield to this in ten minutes. There is nothing that will so promptly cut short a congestion of the lungs, sore throat or rheumatism as hot water when applied promptly and thoroughly.

Pieces of cotton batting dipped in hot water and kept applied to old sores or new cuts, bruises and sprains is the treatment now generally adopted in hospitals. I have seen a sprained ankle cured in an hour by showering it with hot water poured from a height of three feet.

Tepid water acts promptly as an emetic and hot water taken freely half an hour before bed time is the best of cathartics in the case of constipation, while it has a most soothing effect on the stomach and bowels. This treatment continued for a few months with proper attention to diet will cure any curable case of dyspepsia.

Headache almost always yields to the simultaneous application of hot water to the feet and the back of the neck.

Duke of Wellington's Watches.

The Duke of Wellington was extremely fond of watches, and needed to have at least half a dozen within his reach, and all ticking their liveliest at once, and this is but half the story. Fearing some ill might befall those just under his eye, orders were given, whenever the great man traveled, to have as many more stowed away in a portmanteau made to fit his carriage.

One time piece was, above all others, his acknowledged favorite, it was of old-fashioned English construction, and had once been the property of Tippo Sahib.

Another of the duke's treasures had a strange history. Napoleon had ordered it of Breguet for the fob of his brother Joseph and as an extra courtesy directed a miniature map of Spain to be wrought in niello on one side, and the imperial and royal arms on the other. Just as this lovely gift was finished Joseph was driven out of his kingdom by the duke, and the emperor, for reasons best known to himself, refused to take or pay for the costly bauble.

At the peace it was purchased from Breguet and presented by Sir E. Paget to the duke of Wellington.

Another watch owned by the duke was made for Marshal Junot, and a great horological curiosity it is, there have never been more than two like it. They are constructed to mark both lunar and weekly movements.

The great duke gave preference to certain "montres de touche"—and he had several of them—a contrivance of Breguet's having sundry studs or knobs by which one could feel what hour it was, and this merely by what seemed "just fumbling in the pocket."—Harper's Bazar.

An Empress at Weisbaden.

The Empress of Austria is at present staying at a Weisbaden hotel under the name of the Countess Hohenembs, and spends her days like an athlete in training. She seldom attends the concerts, theaters and other amusements of the fashionable watering place, but a day rarely passes when she does not ride to some of the surrounding chateaus or villages accompanied by her groom. Not content with these long rides the empress devotes several hours daily to fencing and gymnastic exercises, in which she is said to show more skill and endurance than many a practised fencer or gymnastic of the so called stronger sex. She rises at dawn and with brief intervals, spends the whole day either in riding or athletics, and long before the fashionable world thinks of retiring the empress is enjoying the refreshing sleep which follows physical exhaustion.

A Long Rest.

"Oh, dear me!" murmured a six foot invalid stretching back over a rocking chair and scraping his toes against the ceiling, "I'm almost worn out, and must take a long rest."

"Let me move the furniture out of the room, lovey," replied his wife, "before you begin your rest."

"What for?"

"So as to have nothing interfering with you," she said, "and then to save my household goods from damage, too."

He looked at her fiercely as she proceeded,

"But if you'll go into the back yard darling you'll have more room, and if you should become cramped there I can persuade the neighbors to take down a panel of their fence, and then you could have a real nice long rest."

For answer he jerked his hat on and fled from the house.

MONDAY MORNING MAY 5 1884

RIOT AT BUFFALO

Serious Trouble between Striking Longshoremen and Italians.

BUFFALO May 4—Labor troubles between Italians and longshoremen are beginning to assume serious proportions. Managers of the boat lines absolutely refuse in any way to recognize the longshoremen union while none of the men will accept work from boat lines except by order of the union. In consequence families of longshoremen are in some cases suffering for want of food and the men are beginning to get desperate.

Yesterday morning a gang of [illegible] assaulted an inoffensive Italian walking [illegible] with two loaves of bread tied in a red [illegible]. They knocked him down and kicked him. Officers quickly cleared the street. A large crowd gathered at the [illegible] headquarters and began stoning the building. The crowd was ordered to move on. The command was not obeyed until a portion of the reserve police force was summoned. [illegible] mob attacked a building in [illegible] occupied by [illegible] Italians. The mob threw bricks [illegible] the building breaking windows [illegible]. The Greeks fired at the [illegible] but none were [illegible].

The docks are crowded with people the Western Transit Company's docks being the especial object of attention. [illegible] freight houses will [illegible] guard.

The [illegible] consultation to lay [illegible] the situation. It is probable a force of 100 or more special policemen will be [illegible] in view of a possible emergency. The regular force has now for three days [illegible] prevent an outbreak but it has required the concentration of every available man at headquarters. The entire city must be patrolled day and night. The transportation companies have served notice on the authorities of the city and county that they will be held liable in case of any damage to their property. Manager Bullard of the Union Transportation Company stated that there would be [illegible] longshoremen and that every effort would be made by the transportation company from now to [illegible] of navigation to emancipate themselves from trouble with labor unions.

CRIMINAL CALENDAR

DESPERATE FIGHT WITH [illegible] CONVICTS

PITTSBURGH May 4—[illegible] the Haynes and Dan [illegible] who [illegible] were released from the penitentiary have been committing many burglaries recently in Armstrong [illegible] and Clarion counties this state. Yesterday Detective Stevenson of Kittanning with three assistants attempted to arrest the men. They each had two self-cocking revolvers and told the officers to go home which they did. This afternoon another posse of twelve men headed by District Attorney Buchanan met the men in a deep hollow about four miles from Kittanning. Several shots were exchanged and it is reported that three or four men were killed. The report reached here late this evening and as the telegraph office at [illegible] is closed nothing more will be learned tonight. The many robberies which occurred of late in [illegible] have put the officers on the alert and the Haynes brothers and Mitchell were seen yesterday carrying plunder to a deep hollow a mile below Mill [illegible] where they secreted it and where the encounter occurred this afternoon. The men are desperate characters and since their release from the penitentiary have been a terror to the community.

KITTANNING Pa May 4—The reported encounter between the Haynes brothers and Dan Mitchell and a sheriff's posse did not take place. After the failure of Officer Stevenson and his assistants to arrest them a sheriff's posse of fifteen started after them but so far have been unable to find any trace of the outlaws. It is reported that they robbed a store at Cochrane Mills last night. A vigilance committee is forming through [illegible] to capture the [illegible].

Last night officers King, O'Shea and Staley attempted to arrest three brothers named Shelly who resisted and in the encounter which ensued King was shot twice in the head and O'Shea and Staley had narrow escapes each having bullet holes through their coats. About twenty shots were exchanged. The three Shellys were arrested today and are now in jail. They have the reputation of being desperate men.

THE COPIAH COUNTY OUTRAGE

HAZLEHURST May 4—The grand jury of the circuit court for Copiah county in session since the 28th has returned a bill for murder against the [illegible] brothers for killing B B Riels. The grand jury are all democrats including one colored man and found an indictment against F B Wheeler for murder. It may be remembered that on the fifth of November 1883 Wheeler shot and killed J B Matthews a prominent republican ex-sheriff and deputy internal revenue collector. The case acquired national notoriety through the senate investigating committee. Wheeler was arrested and yesterday it was concluded that the case was not bailable. A change of venue was also denied.

A [illegible] MURDERER'S [illegible] PUNISHMENT

HARRISBURG May 3—The jury in the case of Wm Andrews charged with killing his wife and then burning her body at High Spire July 1 1881 returned a verdict of murder in the second degree. The verdict was based on the charge of the court which held that with no [illegible] proof of the killing [illegible] was murder in the second degree. No portion of the burned body was [illegible] by the commonwealth. Andrews had already [illegible] under the first degree but was [illegible]. He was sentenced to [illegible] the full penalty.

Joseph the Nez Perce is the title of an article from the [illegible] of Lieutenant C E S Wood Twenty first infantry in the May number of the Century.

General N A Miles and his chief quartermaster Major A S Kimball returned from San Francisco via Ogden and Boise City on Tuesday.

General Rufus Ingalls well known as one of the old time army officers of the pioneer days of Oregon has been elected vice president of the Portland National bank.

The [illegible] Merrymakers a minstrel organization composed of soldiers gave an [illegible] performance to a crowded house at the garrison theater on Tuesday evening.

Captain Gilbert C Smith and family leave to-day for Baltimore where Captain Smith is to be hereafter stationed. Mr Arthur Hanne of the [illegible] accompanies the captain as clerk.

Lieut W H Scott First cavalry whose leg was seriously injured by an accident several months since will as his physicians have decided have to undergo amputation of the injured limb to save life.

The remains of the late Colonel F D Baker were exhumed from the military cemetery and forwarded to San Francisco last Saturday for interment in the Lone Mountain cemetery where his father the late General E D Baker is buried.

Medical Director Dr McKee met with what might have been a serious accident on Monday. In mistake for some medicine the doctor took a dose of carbolic acid. By the prompt administering of antidotes serious consequences were averted and the doctor is now out again.

The exchange of the First and Second regiments of cavalry is to be mainly by marching. The troops of the First cavalry at Forts Walla Walla, Spokane, Lapwai and Coeur d'Alene will rendezvous at the last named post by June 15 and then march by the Mullan road to Missoula where they will meet and exchange transportation with an equal number of troops of the Second cavalry. The troops at Fort Klamath and Bidwell will march to the nearest point on the O P R R and proceed by rail to Helena whence they will be distributed to various points in Montana.

Settlement in Wasco County

Dalles Times-Mountaineer

We are informed by a person who has spent several weeks in riding over the Grass Valley country that the present season for crops has never been equaled in the history of the country.

The section between the Deschutes and John Day rivers has been largely settled for the last three years by eastern farmers who understand agriculture in its most advanced stages. They are farming the soil to the best advantage and no doubt will be rewarded by abundant crops.

There have been over 30,000 acres our informer says turned up this spring which will be sowed in grain this fall.

There is a great deal of railroad land which settlers are afraid to improve for fear that if the land should revert they would lose their improvements, and if the railroad gains the title they would be charged double the actual value.

Our informant rode over this section three years ago and there were only three residents between the John Day and the Deschutes. Now the country is settled up and five little towns do the business for the population between the two streams.

FIELD AND THE PRESIDENCY

EUGENE CITY May 1 1884

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

In the daily Standard of yesterday is published an editorial article advocating the nomination of Judge Field for the presidency by the democratic party. A part of the article seems to have been copied from the San Francisco Alta but the part cited from that paper appears to meet the approval of the Standard. The Standard has published several articles of late which have been going the rounds of the press commendatory of Justice Field. That paper engaged in an effort just four years ago to boom the same gentleman but his effort did not elicit any enthusiasm. What appeared to be a boom was entirely worked up and it had but little existence outside of Portland. The Multnomah delegation at the Albany convention in 188[illegible] [illegible] for the [illegible] of the Standard [illegible] considerable yelling for Field and disgusted many delegates.

It is inexplicable to me that any democrat should really believe that the democracy of California [illegible] or any other state or territory want Field for president. There is a very strong feeling [illegible] against him [illegible]. This feeling is especially strong among the democracy.

One of the chief articles in democratic platforms [illegible] the enactment by [illegible] of laws fixing maximum rates to be charged by railroads [illegible] for the transportation of passengers and freight and preventing [illegible] by common carriers. This [illegible] as well as the propriety of doing these things is asserted by the democracy almost everywhere and this is regarded by a majority of democrats as one of the most important of public questions. Now how does Judge Field stand on this question? [illegible] He has made his record upon this question and [illegible] explain it away.

In the case of Munn vs Illinois reported at page 113 of volume 4 of the U S supreme court reports the right of the state of Illinois to regulate the [illegible] to be made by warehousemen was presented for decision and the right of the state to do so was affirmed by the court but Justices Field and [illegible] dissented and denied the right of the state to regulate the acts of warehousemen.

In the case of the Chicago [illegible] R R vs Iowa reported at page [illegible] of volume of reports the question was [illegible] the state of Iowa had the right to pass a statute regulating charges to be made by railways [illegible] [illegible] Field [illegible].

In the case of Peik vs Chicago [illegible] R R [illegible] reported at page 164 [illegible] state of Wisconsin [illegible] freight and fare on railways [illegible] Field [illegible] the democratic platform of this state and [illegible].

It would be impossible for Field to accept the [illegible] for the presidency [illegible] this vital democratic doctrine [illegible] it is almost [illegible] principles [illegible] Standard asserts that he will be [illegible].

I will refer to another act of Judge Field showing that it would be impossible for the democratic masses to support him [illegible] the act of congress known as the [illegible] bill the general features of which are well known. What are known as the [illegible] to the United States [illegible] testing the constitutionality [illegible] Field [illegible] the plaintiffs to err [illegible] Pacific Railroad Company [illegible] [illegible] votes of almost every democrat and [illegible] republican members. The supreme court after thorough consideration of the case [illegible] held that the act was constitutional but Justice Field again [illegible] in company with Bradley and Strong [illegible] standing as in the other case [illegible] friend [illegible] Mr [illegible] Justice Field has [illegible] by his corporation [illegible] in some important cases in California.

The opinions of the supreme court in these cases [illegible] were delivered by Chief Justice Waite and so far as I include [illegible] the democratic party than Field [illegible] question [illegible] article [illegible] as if it had been written by [illegible] managers [illegible] of the democratic [illegible] Central and Southern Pacific [illegible].

There is no danger of Field being nominated [illegible] I was glad to learn that any leading [illegible] democrat of California has any [illegible] in the [illegible] to the democracy [illegible] principles of the party [illegible] and the Chinese would rally around Field but the democracy— WILLAMETTE

THE PHELPS LETTER

The Chicago Tribune summarizes the letter of William Walter Phelps to the New York [illegible] in reply to that paper's reiteration of the old charges against Blaine. The press report has had much to say about this letter but has not given even an intelligible synopsis of [illegible].

The facts in the case as elucidated by Mr Phelps's letter and as extracted from the Evening Post [illegible] are as follows:

1 The bill renewing the land grant to the state of Arkansas of which the Little Rock and Fort Smith railroad was [illegible] was passed by the house of representatives [illegible] which had already passed [illegible].

2 It was not until the following [illegible] letter [illegible] that Mr Blaine acquired [illegible] the Little Rock and Fort Smith enterprise.

At the time the bill was passed Mr Blaine had no acquaintance with Caldwell, one of the two friends [illegible] charge [illegible] was not [illegible] connected with the enterprise.

4 Mr Blaine's connection with the bill was in sustaining a point of order made by Gen Logan that an amendment [illegible] to tack on the [illegible] subsidy was irrelevant and not germane to the bill. It is admitted that this ruling was correct and proper; that it was sustained by the house which voted unanimously for the bill and that any other ruling would have been unparliamentary and unjust.

5 There is no charge that $1 of bond or acre of land or anything was ever paid or promised or [illegible] to secure the passage of the bill reviving the land grant to the state of Arkansas and Mr Blaine's attitude in regard to it was not different from that of all the members of both houses of congress for there was no opposition to the bill.

6 When Mr Blaine acquired an interest in the Little Rock and Fort Smith railroad he had the same right to do so that every other person had and when the bonds he sold to his Maine friends declined in value he took them back as he had agreed to do—a transaction which would be utterly incomprehensible to a professional manipulator of railroad securities.

7 There is not a scintilla of evidence that the Little Rock and Fort Smith bonds purchased by Tom Scott and by him transferred to the Union Pacific Company were the same as those held by Blaine, and the attempt to make this appear failed completely upon the very testimony upon which the charge was grounded.

These items comprehend we believe a fair and candid statement of the entire business so far as Mr Blaine's name is involved. From this statement it does not appear that Mr Blaine was improperly influenced in the position he took in regard to the Arkansas land grant but it is manifest that he could not have taken any other position without disregarding his power as speaker nor without [illegible] himself in antagonism to both houses of congress. Many months later he identified himself with a project in which he [illegible] confidence and induced certain of his friends to invest at the same time when the enterprise proved to be unprofitable he took the entire [illegible] himself. So far from being discreditable to him the transaction stands to his honor.

MRS FRANK LESLIE

Her Approaching Marriage to her French But her Boy Marquis

One of the conspicuous personages [illegible] Patti's first night was the Marquis de [illegible] who is about to marry the widow of the late Frank Leslie. The marquis is a study. Imagine a thirty-black beard [illegible] oiled until he always [illegible] a New York butcher and a French waiter dressed [illegible] of taste or money and you have the marquis. Over his forehead he wears a flap of black hair. [illegible] first care after taking off his hat is to see that this lock or bunch of hair [illegible] place. I watched him on Monday night as he handed the ample Mrs Leslie into a box at last down behind her. His chief occupation during the evening was to make it that his mop was [illegible] vacantly wherever Mrs Leslie looked at him. If the pair [illegible] that they [illegible] admired [illegible] relation upon the amused stare with which the Astors, Goelets and other cadets of fashion regarded them and it was really comical to see the look of [illegible] curiosity and aversion with which their neighbors now and then furtively examined them. It takes a woman to express [illegible] things in a few glances but Mrs Leslie was proof against the crowd and sat smiling as complacently as if made of wax. The history of the marquis is somewhat involved in doubt. He is said to be the son of a [illegible] London [illegible] and [illegible] a title in Portugal. Altogether [illegible] curiosity. Mrs Leslie is rather a handsome woman with plenty of money. She was a Miss Follin and married Mr Squier who represented this government in Central America and [illegible] works on all that country are still [illegible] to be found in every library. When he came back to New York he was engaged by Frank Leslie as a managing editor. Subsequently [illegible] divorce came and Mrs Squier became Mrs Frank Leslie. Leslie too had been divorced from his first wife but the new marriage was a most happy one. Leslie was making $100,000 a year then by his publications and Mrs Leslie accompanied him to the publication house every day and had her own little private office. Whatever she wished done on the paper was accomplished and they say that when one of the writers made a suggestion and Leslie pooh poohed he frequently went to his wife's room and returned in a little time and adopted the suggestion. Mrs Leslie had changed his mind. The pair spent money lavishly. They had a mansion at Saratoga and Leslie had a passion for landscape gardening.

Finally the crash came and Leslie failed not because his affairs were badly managed but from the simple fact that he spent more money than he earned. After his death Mrs Leslie went to work like a heroine, the creditors were all paid and she got possession of the property and has kept it on a paying basis since though the periodicals do not bring in anything like the revenue of former years. Still the fortune is enough to make a marquis envy it and Mrs Leslie is ambitious enough to throw it and herself away on a title which will make her Lady L[illegible]ville and which she hopes may make for her a passage into some kind of society.

PORTLAND TO PRINEVILLE.

EAST PORTLAND May 2 1884

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

In former days when a man ran off from his creditors or went away with another man's wife it was the fashion to say that he had gone to Ochoco. It was then the most isolated portion of Oregon accessible only by long and tedious drives over sandy wastes colder than the Russian steppes in winter and hotter than Arabian deserts in summer. But the growth and progress of the state has filled up the Ochoco country with a lively and stirring population and its trade is an important feeder to the constantly expanding traffic of Portland.

Leaving here by the O R & N train at 8 A M you arrive at The Dalles at [illegible] you have the [illegible] A M and pass out over the [illegible] Brown's hill on which [illegible] recently spent by the citizens of The Dalles [illegible] with Mr Joseph Sherar [illegible] $600 [illegible]. Driving along for twenty seven miles [illegible] we come [illegible] Deschutes hill which [illegible] It is a big grade cut out [illegible] [illegible] grade [illegible] Sherar's bridge [illegible] Mr Sherar has [illegible] a fee of sixteen [illegible] miles at least [illegible] a perfect [illegible] Deschutes [illegible] Mr Sherar [illegible] [illegible] William [illegible] [illegible] right [illegible].

ROYAL EXTRAS

Labouchere's Opinion of the Charges upon Tax Payers for the Queen's Family

London Truth

That a country should be required to pay £ 81 for the garter fees of Prince Albert Victor is quite monstrous and I do not understand why it should cost £100 pounds more to make H R H a knight than was paid last year for the king of Netherlands. This amount is for the most a perquisite of the dean of Windsor who (a young man not yet [illegible]) receives besides over £2,000 a year with an excellent house from the revenues of her majesty's free chapel and £600 a year as domestic chaplain to the queen.

The charges for royal journeys to the continent are not less scandalous for all these voyages are mere pleasure expeditions. There were twenty three charges of £40 each. The prince of Wales and his sons had crossed seven times, the duke and duchess of Edinburgh five times, the duke and duchess of Mecklenburg and the duke and duchess of Connaught [illegible] three times, the German crown princess twice and the [illegible] of Teck, duke of Cambridge and Princess Beatrice once each. That the tax payer should be mulcted in the traveling expenses of the German crown princess and of the Strelitz family is really too bad, but the [illegible] similar [illegible] for the king and queen of Greece and the prince and princess [illegible].

It is very [illegible] of there being a precedent [illegible] right in the matter for it was not till the present reign that the royal family began [illegible] to travel abroad and there is [illegible] of analogy between the rare journeys of the reign of George III and George IV and those of the royalties of the present day. If these distinguished travelers require private steamers at £40 a passage they are well able to pay for them out of the ample allowances which have been granted by the country.

THE GRANT MEN BEGIN TO TALK

Washington Special to Chicago Inter Ocean

There is something in this Grant talk said a prominent republican last evening and [illegible] keep your eyes open for it. I think the majority of the Logan men are Grant men at heart and many of the Arthur men in the south. Chauncey I Filley of Missouri who has been elected a delegate is for Grant. Tom Platt of New York another delegate is for Grant. [illegible] supposed to be [illegible] Logan general western manager [illegible] for Grant and so is John Belford of Colorado. Ex Senator Jones and Boru[illegible] Mackay will head the Nevada delegation and they are for Grant. Conkling will be back from Europe in time to take a hand in the same line. You see Grant has been quiet lately and has cultivated to a great extent the [illegible] name of 1880. Many Blaine men now speak very well of him. The Grant men think that he will be nominated after a long fight over the leading candidates wears out the patience of the convention. Let me give you some pointers in this case. Of the delegates who have been already elected to the national convention fifty wear 306 badges and belong to the immortal old guard. Isn't that a good nucleus for a whirlwind sweep to the old commander at the right moment? Of these 50 there are 44 supposed to be for Arthur 3 for Blaine and 3 for Logan. Alabama alone has 8 of the 306 men in her delegation, Arkansas 6, Georgia 5, Illinois 1, Kentucky 1, Louisiana 4, Maryland 1, Mississippi 2, Missouri 4, New York 6, Pennsylvania 3, South Carolina 2, Tennessee 3 and Virginia 4. The way in which they are distributed among the states makes their influence the greater. More are coming from other states, look out for them. The only Illinois delegate in the convention of 1880 who has been elected this year is J M Truitt, of Hillsboro, and he is one of the 306.

Enclose 10 cents and the address of an eastern friend to this office for the statistical OREGONIAN. The best medium to circulate in the east.

PRECINCT VOTE, 1882.

In view of the approaching elections, and for the purpose of affording our readers an opportunity of comparing returns we publish the complete vote of the state by precincts for congressman and governor at the last general election held the first Monday in June 1882. It will be found convenient as a matter of reference and may be relied upon as correct it having been copied from the returns as filed in the office of the secretary of state.

TRADE AND COMMERCE.

FRIDAY May 3

The first half of the day gave shipping clerks and porters plenty to do. The city trade also proved active. All lines move along quietly with little or no change in values.

O R & N stock to-day was in large dealing and closed 2 4 better.

Overland receipts include [illegible] cs confectionery 6 tins matches 5 cs meal [illegible] sks prunes 13 cs lard 3 bbls 40 cs bak powder 100 cs corn beef 12 tcs hams 4 5 cs can goods 22 bxs soap 20 bxs 20 sks dried apples 4 cs cigars 16 pkgs tobacco.

For the month of April but 16 failures were reported in Oregon and Washington. The liabilities in Oregon were $12 20 and assets $[illegible] the liabilities in Washington were $[illegible] assets $36 400. The following trades were represented: Dry goods 4, saloons [illegible] general store 2, restaurants [illegible] harness 1 [illegible] machinist 1. This showing [illegible] a healthy trade feeling and is far from discouraging.

During April [illegible] cargoes of lumber were shipped foreign from Puget sound, [illegible] loaded at Blakely [illegible] at Port [illegible] and 1 at Gamble. [illegible] went to Honolulu, 1 to Melbourne, 1 to Panama, [illegible] to Sydney, 1 to [illegible] and 1 to Valparaiso. [illegible] went in American bottoms and [illegible] in British. They carried 4,478 ft rough [illegible] 131 [illegible] dressed 1,500 [illegible] 651 [illegible] lath 182,000 shingles all of the declared value of $52,799 45. From March 20 to April 20 Burrard Inlet mills shipped foreign 2,800,161 ft rough [illegible] and lumber 32,172 pickets 62,349 lath.

WHEAT—Telegraphed markets to-day are quiet and neglected. Our market is in small business with holders generally demanding $1 50 for good sized parcels of valley. Very little is now coming in and old purchases have been mostly delivered.

OATS—Receipts liberal and market heavy at 48@50 for best feed. Sales are slower.

POTATOES—A choice quality sold at $1 10 per cental but good are freely offered at one cent, and common down to 50 cents per bushel. The San Francisco market is completely demoralized.

ONIONS—An advance is reported from San Francisco but operators here are cautious and refuse to buy on the strength of it. An uncertain market is looked for.

PROVISIONS—The demand is increasing for meats and new orders are coming in from the upper country. Values are kept down by liberal stocks.

BUTTER—Less coming from California, but stocks are ample and values are still weak.

EGGS—A good local demand is had at 22½@25 cents but these prices lessen the outside request. A decline is looked for by most dealers.

POULTRY—Chickens in free supply at $6@6 50 for best. Ducks wanted with an advance on $13 possible. Geese in small movement and not wanted. Turkeys sell at 15 and 16 cents.

HIDES AND PELTS—Dry hides and sheep pelts bring full prices but others are slow sale and dealers will not pay up.

SHIPPING NOTES

The T F Oakes brought to Tacoma 10,420 rails 2151 kegs spikes [illegible] bdls fish plates and 200 kegs [illegible] nuts. Those who have seen the Oakes say she is an improvement in many respects over the [illegible] but has a less attractive form. During the passage she behaved well but is not a fast sailer the [illegible] being 128 in less. She handles easily and is a quick receiver. In light winds she does much better than expected. When off Cape Horn her steering gear became twisted so that it worked hard for several days requiring four men to handle it. She has heavier spars than has the Starbuck and is fitted with more elegance. Her bow is said to be [illegible] but her stern is of a nationality [illegible]. Captain Cliff is highly satisfied with her and takes a great pride in showing visitors over the vessel. In all probability she will come around to this river when discharged.

The Olive S Southard drew about 22 feet when leaving here. She ran aground in 21 6 water some thirty feet out of the channel under her jibboom and where her keel should have been is twenty four feet. Low tides prevail now so that her lighterage bill will be increased. This frequent grounding of ships close to deep water would appear to be almost inexcusable.

Brsh Cattloch hence Nov 31 with 19,418 ctls wheat by G C Sar & Co has arrived out in a passage of 160 days.

Astorian: The Br iron bk Jessie Jamison 531 tons now at Victoria has been chartered by A W Berry of this city to load salmon at Astoria for London direct. She will go on berth about the 15th and will take about 30,000 cases. The Jessie Jamison will be the first vessel to load salmon wholly at Astoria this season.

The pontoons to be used in raising the Umatilla are nearly completed. The hole in the bow of the vessel will soon be stopped up but the work of closing the open spaces in the deck will occupy the best part of May so that it will be June before the attempt is made to lift and pump out the vessel.
